Santos, 29th Jan. 1628. The Homer, now the Santiste, Capt. T. Y. ook under her convoy. On the st fernoon, thay saw a brig privateer, which at 8 o'clock P. M. it being very dark, passed through the convoy with out molesting them in the least; and without firing a gun hoarded the corvette astern. But in the darkness, part of the boarders justified from their bowsprit into the corvette's boat which hang astern, and fell rato the water. This calmed some confusion, and the corvette's crew not time to recover and force the others overboard. They then baored a second and a third time. with no better success; and finally the brig made her escape in the darkness, leaving part of her bowsprit, jib, pietols, &c. on board the corvette. The attack lasted in the whole tliffty-seven minutes, and the corvetse must have heen taken had it not been for the mishap in the boat astern; or had the brig boarded in almost any other place. The corverte had two men killed and ten wounded. The privateer must have lost a great many men. She was lately the Niger, of Baltimore, and is now commanded by Capt. Coe.
