MEMORIAL
OF THE CITIZENS OF NEW ORLEANS.

THE unnerstigned, in common with their fellow citizens in general, have for a long time, been impressed with the importance of providing more appropriate places for Sepulture than those which are now in use in our city. In all countries and all polished—barbarian and civilized—the Grave has been an object of tender and solemn consideration.—Feeling no less than custom, hallows the place where the dead repose. An instinctive awe seizes us when we enter the Charnel house. We even reverence the mound or the monument, that designates the place where human bones have been deposited, and there the man a wretch who wantonly disturbs sepulchral ashes.

It has long been the opprobrium of our city, that we have deposited our dead in, frail and loathsome vaults above ground, or beneath a shallow covering of mud in diluvial marsh; which no body would visit but from necessity, and where corpses have been heaped upon each other with a cold calculating parsimony, disrespectful to the memory of our departed friends and shocking to the sensibilities of the living, as well as injurious to their health.

We believe that the period has arrived when the attention of our public authorities should be directed to this important subject.

A new plan and system for a cemetery have been shown us by Mr Plough, to be denominated the which in all their essential features seem admirably adapted to the peculiar exigencies of the city in which we live.

"City of the Dead,"

We therefore earnestly recommend the above plan, to the candid consideration of your honorable body, hoping that an improvement so desirable may not be neglected from the want of the necessary encouragement.

GREAT SALE OF TOWN PROPERTY.

ON Monday, the 2d day of October next will commence at Lumberton, Hickman co. Ky. one of the greatest sales of town property which has perhaps ever taken place, at least in the West. It will consist of about seven hundred acres in town lots in Columbus, of various sizes, from half acre and upwards to upwards of forty acres, of every size and situation to suit purchasers, comprising one of the best landings, not only at the town of Columbus, but on the Mississippi River. The value of this property is perhaps not to be equalled by that of any similar unimproved property on the Mississippi River; and an opportunity is now about to be offered for one of the most valuable investments of the kind which can probably be ever made.

Columbus is the neatest eligible point for a town to the head of navigation on the main Mississippi River, being but about 20 miles below the mouth of Ohio. It is universally admitted by all who have visited it to occupy one of the finest and handsomest sites in the world for a large town or city. Its landings in extent and accessability can vie with those of any place in the world. It has fine situations also for ship, boat and dock yards. It is surrounded by a country which can compare with any in the west, or in the world of the same latitude, as to richness & fertility; & is covered with inexhaustible quantities of the finest timber for ship and boat building and for nearly all other purposes.

Added to all this, this place is not only by far the best and most general crossing place on the Mississippi River, below the mouth of the Ohio, having only about one mile and a half to cross, and practicable at all seasons, but it is the nearest eligible point to the centre of the Union for the future seat of general government, and must as sure as day becomes the grand intermediate port between New Orleans and all the upper ports on the waters of the Mississippi River.—Much more could be said about this place but we deem it unnecessary. We invite those who now wishes make a profitable investment of their property to call and examine for themselves, confident that they will find what we say about it to be true.

"Great improvement in Sugar Making from Cane Juice."

CONSULS, Agents, and others, interested in countries, states and colonies, producing the sugar-cane, are respectfully referred to the details of their improvement, contained in this paper, in this days paper; and I beg to inform them that in consequence of the laws of the United States affording to aliens (of whom I am one) no copy-right interest, I am unable to publish "the histories and mysteries of this business, unless they think fit to subscribe for 500 copies at $10 each, of which one half to be paid to the publisher on his security as soon as the whole number of 500 copies shall have been ordered, and not before.

I have obtained the accommodation of Dr. Plough, of 78 Canal street, New Orleans, to deliver instructions in his house; so that planters of the State of Louisiana may derive the greatest benefit next crop season, provided they shall order instructions, and I assure them that the most intelligent among them do not realise, and never have realized, the one half of the profit of what they possess the means to obtain, and will obtain if they receive this offer.

Late Chief Manager of the Congress Sugar Refinery, New York.

DESIDERATA IN SUGAR MAKING FROM CANE JUICE.

To the Consuls and other functionaries or agents of all nations and colonies, where sugar is produced and to all persons interested therein.

Gentlemen—Permit me to invite your attention to the desiderata I have contained in the various branches and departments of the manufacture of sugar, and other products of the cane, with a view to the universal dissemination thereof; and in particular, to their diffusion in North and South America, and in the East and West Indies. They are as follows, viz.

1. To improve the quality of any portion, or the whole, of the coloring, & of all other impurities, to the immediate production of sugar from the cane juice.

2. To prevent the injurious sugar hitherto universally resulting from the system pursued in boiling, in all plantation boiling-houses; in which department I have prescribed rules for the guidance of the boilerman, not only intelligible to the artistic, but equally so to the negro; all to bring result not only super of superior quality, but a much larger portion of absolutely crystallized sugar; in fact, a larger quantity of sugar, equal in quality to sugar which has undergone refinement, than has hitherto been produced of the cane juice; and the improvements are such as every one which the sugar planters in every part of the world, except in China, convert the juice of their cane.

3. To prevent the loss hitherto universally resulting from its injudicious treatment, by manipulation subsequent to the boiling of the syrup to sugar.

4. To prevent subsequently the smallest loss by percolation from sugar deposited in hogsheads.

5. To prevent deterioration and loss of sugar during a voyage across.

6. To convert into molasses and sugar a large portion of the unripe and fermentable parts of the juices, and also the juices of some cane, and cane-juice which has gone into an incipient state of fermentation; likewise, even a large portion of the dry, solid, ligneous parts of the cane stalks, hitherto converted into nothing of any value beyond the production of manure, or used as fuel in the West Indies, under the denomination of "bagasse."

7. To augment the quantity and greatly enhance the value of molasses produced by the existing exceedingly injurious process of sugar boiling in plantation sugar houses; and seven, the molasses produced by the sugar refineries; and upon this branch, as upon every other, I beg it to be understood that I speak from my own practical knowledge; having had very extensive experience as chief manager at several sugar refineries, in one of which I have refined over 3200 loaves in a single day; and the molasses I have made have never failed to yield a price and profit far exceeding those of other refineries; though the latter were much richer of a larger time, thus giving to mine the two-fold advantage of price and quality.

8. To prevent molasses from fermenting in the cask for a much longer period than heretofore.

9. To convert molasses into the finest vinegar at a most prodigious profit.

10. To convert molasses into spirits of the finest quality, and in unusual abundance.

I beg to assure such gentlemen who may wish to avail themselves of the benefits, that they may rest assured of their reality; and that I will at once remove both doubts and difficulties.

I remain, Gentlemen,
Your most obedient servant,
WM. GUTTERIDGE,
Late chief manager of the Congress Sugar Refinery, New York. aug 29
