NOTICE TO CORRESPONDENTS.—We have received an article signed "Many Citizens":—As the circumstance mentioned will shortly undergo judicial investigation, we must forbear to publish any thing relating to it, as no doubt it will be justly DECIDED by a competent tribunal.

From a late London Paper.

HOUSE OF LORDS, [illegible]day, July 16.

Foreign Policy.—Lord Holland rose to move an address to the crown, to obtain information relative to two important branches of the Foreign affairs, viz. those branches connected first, with the Treaty of Triple Alliance, and the situation of Greece, Turkey and Russia; secondly, with our ancient ally the kingdom of Portugal. After speaking at length on the circumstance which lead to the Treaty of London, and on the changes which had since taken place in Europe, and which called upon his Majesty's Government for further information than had already been given, the Noble Lord moved for the production of any treaties which have been concluded between Great Britain and from his Majesty's Ambassadors at Constantinople as relate to engagements made by word of mouth for mutual defence with any of the diplomatic agents of the Sublime Porte since 1809; also for copies of all public documents communicated to our Government by Russia, in which the Emperor of Russia has declared his intention of adhering to the conditions of the treaty of July 6 1827, notwithstanding the war with Turkey in which he is at present engaged. Lord Holland then [illegible] numerous violations of Portuguese rights; and while he could afford no countenance to the [illegible] which were made, that his majesty's government were disposed to favor, even in the most indirect manner the usurpation of Don Miguel, he deemed it right for the credit of the government, and the satisfaction of the country, that Parliament should be put in possession of the simplest information on the subject. The noble lord contended by moving for copies of the minutes of conference between Prince Metternich, Count Villa Real, and Sir H Wellesley, relating to Don Miguel, the second son of King John of Portugal, on the 14th of October, 1827. Also, for copies or extracts from the negociations which took place between the plenipotentiaries of their majesties the King of England and the Emperor of Brazil, relative to Dona Maria de Gloria, up to the 24th of last May." The noble lord further moved for "copies of instructions to Sir Frederick Lamb, respecting the usurpation of Don Miguel and the non fulfilment of his engagements."

The Earl of Aberdeen contended that the papers to which Lord Holland alluded, even if produced, would give but an imperfect and partial view of the transactions which they were required to explain; and the publication of them might, of course, be attended with injurious effects. With regard to Turkey, he said it was the policy of England to prevent any material diminution of that empire. He had every confidence, however, in the declarations of Russia of the disinterested motives which influenced the emperor in carrying on the war, and he reiterated the intention of government to act up to the spirit of the treaty of London, which was of a pacific nature. With reference to the affairs of Portugal, the Earl of Aberdeen contended that there was no reason to apprehend, from recent events, the dissolution of the alliance between Portugal and this country. He took occasion to observe, that he was much mistaken if those person who supported Don Miguel were not friends of this country; and that he feared that among the other party (the friends of Don Pedro) there were not a few who were not only not the friends of this country, but who were also not friendly to good government in any country.

The Duke of Wellington expressed himself to the same effect.

Lord Holland's motion was negatived without a division.

News from the Gold Mines!—H letter from Col. Wm Dismukes, of Anson county, (N. C.) gives the following account of the operations at one of the Gold Mines in that county:

"The Anson Gold Mine is situated on Richardson's creek, 23 miles west of Wadesborough, and owned by Col. Jacob Austin, the heirs of Jonathan Austin, deck, and myself. Very little work has been done here for several years past, until four or five weeks ago, since which I have attended to myself, and have had from 20 to 80 hands at work on shares, who have accounted for upwards of 600 dwts, in different sizes, from the smallest particles to 130 dwts. And this morning a solid piece was found weighing thirteen pounds seven ounces, in its rough state, and it is supposed will net about twelve and half pounds, and worth from 2,500 to 3,000 dollars. This is the largest lump that I ever heard of, except the one found in Cabarrus county some years ago weighing 28 lbs.—Several large pieces have heretofore been taken from this mine weighing from 1 to 5lbs.—The extent is not known, but it is supposed to cover 15 or 20 acres of land, and only about three fourths of an acre has yet been worked. The workmen received one half of all pieces found weighing 1 dwt. and upwards, and two thirds of all under. Any number of hands can be employed, and the proprietors are willing to engage as many as possible, provided they can come well recommended."

A man was put in possession of a vessel, in Boston, as keeper under the sheriff, the owner and captain refused at night to suffer him to occupy the cabin, comming him to the deck—whereupon he brought a suit and recovered damages. The judge decided that he had a right to occupy any part of the vessel, that he possessed all the powers of the high [illegible], and might raise the posse comitatus.

From the Portsmouth Journal.

The "Old Boy".—We yesterday saw in our streets Donald M'Donald, who is "seven years older than Dr. Holyoke." He seems much addicted to intemperance, for which he frequently has received correction, with little hope of reform, however. He has served in several wars. Nearly 50 years ago he offered himself for re-enlistment in the American army. Washington told him he was too old, and with a present dismissed him. Since visiting this town last year, he says he has travelled to Halifax.

The Rev. Jean de la Romeno, Vicar General of the Roman Catholic Church in the island of Dominica, came to his death recently in the 68th year of his age, by falling from a precipice about 300 feet high, near which he was riding on horseback in the evening.

Whalebone Cloth.—M. S hulz, of Prague has taken out a patent for the manufacture of a kind of cloth from Whalebone. We are told that the cloth obtained by this process bears a strong resemblance to silk and is particularly adapted for making cravats, under waistcoats, ribbons, &c.

The accounts as to rice crops in the neighborhood of Georgetown, S. C. are very unfavorable.

A SALAMANDER.

M. Martinez, whose exploits we give below, copied from a Paris paper of June 23; seems to stand fire with all the ease of the fabled salamander.—We published two or three years since a similar account of this extraordinary man. Meat cooked by magick like this, must indeed be done to a turn.

The incombustible man yesterday made his first experiments at the Tivoli, and fulfilled his promisses to the public. A considerable number of spectators, among whom we noticed Dr. Marck and several other Physicians, assisted at this preliminary trial, which affords much interest.

The experiments were divided into three parts. M. Martinez first entered a oven, constructed for the occasion on one of the grass plots of the garden, in order to avoid all suspicion of quackery.—The lowest temperature was, as near as could be ascertained, 60 deg.; he came out at the expiration of 10 or 11 minutes, when the chicken which he held in his hand proved to be ready for the table, having been cooked before a hot fire made at one side of the oven.

The oven was then reheated, and the fire taken out, when M. Martinez went in again, and remained seven minutes. The greatest temperature during this experiment was satisfactorily ascertained to be 110 degrees.

During these two experiments the oven remained open, and as it was nearly three feet high, M. Martinez was able to sit up in it. At the third, he was placed on a board surrounded by candles, and in this manner put in the oven, which was then closed up, where he remained five minutes. At the moment he came out, a thick and suffocating smoke escaped from the mouth of the oven; but the experimenter, although a little affected at first, quickly recovered after taking a cold bath prepared for the occasion.

The following was the state of his pulse before and at the expiration of each trial:—First time going in, 92, coming out, 136; Second 136 and 176; Third, 160 and 200 per minute!

M. Martinez covers himself for these experiments, first with a light clothing of cotton, then with a garment of hatter's wool, thick, and lined with silk, and over the whole a sort of carick of white wool, also lined with silk. He wears on his head a species of monk's hood, made of white wool lined!! He is about 45 years of age, of small statute, and appears to enjoy good health.
