THE NORTHERN MAIL failed yesterday from beyond Mobile.

THOMAS H. BENTON.

The defeat of this gentleman for Congress displeases none save the Northern free soilers. He has been succeeded by an able Whig who will faithfully represent the principles of his party and will support all those measures of public policy, which are calculated to develope the resources and improve the condition of the country. The career of Col. BENTON has been singular and striking. He was elected one of the Senators that first represented Missouri thirty two years ago, and during that entire period he has been guilty of more inconsistencies, and aided in the perpetration of more aggressions on the constitution of the country than any politician who ever held a seat on the floor of Congress.

He commenced his political career and obtained preferment by his devoted attachment to the fortunes of Mr. CLAY, and his earnest advocacy of the principles of that great patriot and statesman. For several years, while in the Senate, he sustained the administration of Mr. ADAMS, watching closely the signs of the times; when he saw the current of popular opinion in Missouri turning in favor of Gen. JACKSON, he jumped a summerset, denounced his old friend and patron, and became a violent partisan of his ancient enemy, with whom, nevertheless, he maintained no personal relations, until Old HICKORY's retirement from office in 1837.

During the eight years' administration of Gen. JACKSON, Mr. BENTON did not oppose one measure of importance that was brought forward by the party, but was the senatorial champion of every assault made on the constitution. To please his master, he attacked with reckless severity the Supreme Court of the United States, co-operated in the destruction of the Bank, justified the abduction of the deposites from the receptacle prescribed by law, and was the ardent supporter of the belligerent message against France. He it was, who proposed the resolution to erase from the journals of the Senate the resolutions condemning the President for the removal of the public monies from the vaults of the Bank, after Congress had declared by a large majority, that they were safe. He proposed to draw black lines around these resolutions, and by operating upon the Legislatures of the States, procured the passage by them of legislative instructions which resulted in the obliteration of the national records. A more deliberate, flagrant and iniquitous invasion of the constitution of the Republic was never committed by man. The constitution had imperatively commanded, that each house should keep a journal of its proceedings—and he had taken an oath to support the constitution. Notwithstanding this he devised a most crafty and nefarious scheme which he carried out, by the expunction of resolutions which had passed the Senate, and had been inscribed upon their journals by their own order. He triumphed in the degradation of the American Senate at the footstool of lawless power, and assumed to himself much glorification for this act of unparalleled [illegible]. He spoke of his master in the manner that a devotee offers up his adorations to a deity, and pronounced him "the greatest mortal that ever lived in the tide of time." Its sycophancy finds but one parallel [illegible] that SEJANUS poured [illegible]. When Gen. HAYNE [illegible] the Senate should adjourn, and not [illegible] lest the sounds of [illegible] should disturb the harmony [illegible]. WEBSTER in his reply [illegible] any other than a contemptuous [illegible] and confined his answer to the [illegible] Carolinian. Although Mr. BENTON bestowed the most fulsome compliment on HAYNE for his effort, yet he voted for the Force Bill and all the measures designed by Gen. JACKSON to crush South Carolina, concealing his true sentiments by a silent vote.

He it was, who threw the fire brand in the Senate in 1830, by attempting to array the West against the East, and charged the East with a deadly hostility to the West. For this unpatriotic speech, he was held up to public execration by his able colleague, Judge BARTON, who denounced him as an American CATILINE.

The next great measure in which Mr. BENTON appeared, was the Texas Treaty of annexation, which he defeated, because he thought it would interfere with the presidential prospects of Mr. BUREN, but he veered around at the next session of Congress, and voted for the unconstitutional joint resolution introduced by Mr. MCDUFFIE, for the annexation of Texas. His conscience was too tender to allow him to vote for a treaty by which foreign Territory was acquired, and which was obnoxious to no constitutional objection, but was not tender enough to prevent him from voting for an unconstitutional resolution, by which the same territory was incorporated with the Republic.

Passing over the feeble dynasty of VAN BUREN, we reach that of Gen. TAYLOR, when we find Mr. BENTON using all his efforts to prevent the passage of the Compromise Measures of 1850. He exhausted parliamentary tactics to defeat them, and threw every possible obstruction in the way of their becoming the law of the land. From the advent of Gen. JACKSON until he lost his election for the Senate—a period of twenty [illegible] years—he was the most turbulent, factious and ill-bred member of that body. His insolence, egotism and brutality had no bounds. With vast stores of political knowledge, considerable learning, and some proficiency in the living languages, he looked upon the whole world as idiots, and considered himself as having the right to dictate to, and browbeat them all. He assumed the dictatorship of his party, the politicians and the Senate, and let loose the floodgates of his violence and [illegible] upon all who refused to succumb to [illegible]. Nearly every Senator was insulted by [illegible]. The Senate Chamber, while he held a seat in it, exhibited to the world the spectacle of a beargarden, or, perhaps, it would be more correct to say, an amphitheatre, where political gladiators encountered each other in the deadly strife, and gave no quarter, but combatted—to use his own vulgar metaphor, "to the hilt."

Before the election of Gen. JACKSON Mr. BENTON had declared that if that eminent citizen were elected President, he would resign his seat in the Senate, for he would have to [illegible] with pistols under his belt; but, as [illegible] he became his most servile tool, [illegible]. Time has, however, demonstrated that it was not JACKSON the Senate [illegible] but BENTON himself, who did everything in his power to brutalize its manners, [illegible] its morals, and destroy its dignity, decorum and independence.

But he is now prostrated, probably for ever, and by the very people, who, for thirty years, [illegible] burnt the savoury incense of sycophancy beneath his nostrils. It excites no sensation of [illegible] in our bosom, to witness the fall of this [illegible] demagogue and vulgar politician, for [illegible] talents which were great, and his knowledge [illegible] was ample, had been prostituted to evil [illegible] or rendered subsidiary to personal [illegible]. Mr. BENTON's fall fortifies our [illegible] in the capacity of the American people for self-government, and reassures us of the existence of a conservative element in the character of our people, that, sooner or later, will [illegible] itself, and rally to the support of sound [illegible] and high moral integrity. Retribution [illegible] slowly on the heel of his misdeeds, [illegible] enjoyed a long career of impunity; but [illegible] of popular justice fell at last. Mr. BENTON has to bear the full weight of condign [illegible] at a period of life which usually inspires sympathy, respect and reverence. Let the American youth, if they would shun his [illegible] avoid the emulation of his example. The proverb, though trite is true, in all relations of life—honesty is the best policy.

FREE CONCERTS AT THE LAKE.—Our readers must not forget that another of Lehmann's Free Concerts takes place this evening at the Lake. The locality, however, has been changed, as these entertainments will in future be given in the garden of the Washington Hotel—a much more commodious arrangement for the audience.

OIL CLOTH AND PLANTATION CLOTHING.—We invite attention to N. C. FOLGER's announcement of a large assortment of oil cloth capots, and aprons, for which he holds a patent right and is consequently the only agent. Mr FOLGER has likewise an extensive stock of plantation clothing, and other articles for plantation use. Our country friends would do well to visit Mr FOLGER's establishment, when they come to town for their winter supplies.

FOR THE PARISH OF PLAQUEMINES.—The steamer Ceres, Capt. Dimitry, will take the place of the Ophelia, which is laid up, and make regular trips to the Balize. For freight or passage, apply on board, at the foot of Bienville street, or to C. DEBLANC, 14 Customhouse street.

JEFFERSON ACADEMY.—It will be seen by an advertisement in our columns that the classes in Mr. LORD's excellent institution, will be re opened on Tuesday week, the 12th instant.

PUBLIC SCHOOLS.—The public schools of the Second District will reopen on Monday next.

LEHMANN'S MUSIC.—We are indebted to Mr. LEHMANN for a Redowa-Polka, "Le Ruisseau," and an Esmeralde, "La Mystique," both of them his own compositions, and exhibiting the grace and fertility of invention which distinguish the author. These pieces are the first of a new series of twelve, two of which will appear at the commencement of each month.

UPS AND DOWNS.

Messrs. MARTIN, OWEN and COBB, have sent us their annual statements indicating by waved lines the variations which have occurred in the value of Lard, Bacon, Whiskey, Pork and Flour, from the beginning to the close of the Commercial year. This statement presents some curious results. Take for instance Lard in kegs, which at the commencement of the late year sold at 11¼c. In the middle of December it had fallen to 9¾; two weeks after it rose to 11¾, and in less than a month had again declined to 9¾, thence fluctuating slightly until July, when it rose rapidly and commanded 13 cents on the 31st August. In Bacon, the changes are nearly as great. Whiskey jumped Jim Crow after a singular fashion, opening the year at 25c., running up to 32 in a month, declining to 23¼ in sixty days, rising slightly and keeping pretty straight until April, when it fell to its lowest point, 20½, and then rose again till, at the end of the Commercial year, it commanded 33 cents. Mess Pork is a splendid zigzag, running through every variety of price, but like the others, ranging high at the end of the year. Flour was at its lowest point a year ago, viz: $5½, and though the irregular line which marks its variations shows that its rise was not steady, but alternated with temporary declines, yet it never fell below $6, and at the close of the year, reached its highest point, viz: $8—at which, if all we hear of the shortness of the Wheat crop be true, it is pretty certain to remain. This statement is quite interesting, and may be profitably studied by commercial men.

AN ECONOMICAL IDEA.—An Irishman who had commenced building a wall round his lot of rather uncommon dimensions, viz: four feet high and six feet thick, was asked the object by a friend: "To save repairs, my honey. Don't you see that if it ever falls down, it will be higher than it is now."

FATALITY.—There has been a terrible visitation from the cholera in the family of Mr. Aaron Daniels, a respectable farmer, residing about three miles north of Ottawa, Ill., and east of Fox river. The first victim was Miss Minerva Daniels, aged 17, who died on Saturday evening; on Monday night, Jonathan Daniels, son, aged 20 years; Ruth Ann Daniels, aged 14 years; Judith Daniels, aged 11 years; Aaron Daniels, 4 years; and on Thursday morning, Mrs. Aaron Daniels, aged about 40 years. The family was widely connected, and among the visitors the following fell victims: On Monday evening, George Head, son of Thomas Head, aged 18 years; Louisa Parker, child of Mrs. Parker, daughter of Aaron Daniels; Mrs. B. Flemings, sister of Mrs. A. Daniels; Alvah Channel, living with A. Daniels; Miss Kingsley, school teacher, who had been boarding in the family; and Mr. Garret Galvin, who had assisted in burying the family of Mr. Daniels. The disease spread in no other families.

THE GREAT METROPOLIS.—According to the recent census, the whole population of London amounts to 2,362,000 souls. Of these 962,000 are under 20, and 1,395,000 are of the age of 20 and upwards. Most of the persons comprising the 962,000 under the age of 20, were born in the city. A large number of these, however, are children, and the curious fact remains that, if the strangers or foreigners were marched back to their homes, the number of men and women left in London would only be 645,000. A large army of 750,000 grown-up persons would leave London if an order could be enforced, the purport of which should be to leave London to the Londoners. Every English county contributes its quota to the population of the metropolis. Middlesex gives 514,000 recruits; Surry 149,000; Kent 89,000. The proportions in which the various counties contribute to swell the metropolis, depend upon their population, their proximity to London, facility of access, absence or presence of home manufactures, and other causes. Out of 10,000 men born in Devon 900 went to London, while in Wilts the proportion who migrated was 1,039 in 10,000.

☞ In the New York Times we find a story of an American in Paris, who could speak no French, who was in the habit of shaving himself, and invariably hacked his skin with the razor. One day, before commencing to scarify himself, he remembered that he had no more court-plaster, and so he rang the bell for the servant. Of course, he was obliged to communicate his desires by pantomime. The servant was far from comprehending with that readiness which characterizes professional pantomimists and the principal performers in a ballet. However, it was evident to him that the gentleman wanted something that would stick, and soon returned with a supply of wafers, and of postage stamps, of various colors and values.—There was no help for it; so the American, after having shaved and cut himself in three places, applied a wafer to his chin, a ten sou stamp to his cheek, and a sixteen sou one to his Adam's apple. Thus sealed and prepaid, he sallied forth into the street, and was the object of much laughter and good-humored comment!

AN OLD PROVERB FALSIFIED.—On the 15th instant, Mr. Benjaman Bird, a bachelor aged 70 years, was married at the Roman Catholic Church on Fifth street, Cincinnati, Ohio, to Mrs. Julia Chaff, a buxom widow of 80. So the old Bird was caught at last by Chaff.

Strange Life of a Murderer.

A writer in the Thomasville Watchman gives the following singular biography of Jas. Hightower, recently convicted of manslaughter in that county. Three years in a dungeon, it seems, is nothing to what he has endured:

"About twenty-one years ago a young lady of this section of country, belonging to a respectable family, became the victim of a vile seducer; the fruit was a boy, who is the subject of our narrative. His mother, as is the case usually, with those of her sex who are unfortunate, married a man of low breeding, and in adverse circumstances, consequently, her son was destined to receive but a limited share of education or moral training. At a tender age his character was peculiar, and in some respects very extraordinary. When only seven years old, he was attending a sugar cane mill; by some means his left arm and hand were crushed, by which accident he forever lost the use of his hand. At the age of ten years he was bitten by a rattlesnake; being nearly alone on the place, he had to call to his aid all the presence of mind of which he was master. Fortunately he used the proper antidote, and thereby saved his life. In the short space of a few months he was again bitten by one of the same species of reptiles; by pursuing the same course as heretofore, he was again rescued from the jaws of death.

Between the age of twelve and fourteen he made several attempts to take the life of his step-father, which shows that he would not be imposed on. About that age he also snapped, several times, a loaded musket at a neighbor. When fourteen years old, he was knocked down by lightning, and did not recover for some time. At the age of sixteen he was attacked while hunting in the woods, by a very large panther. The panther soon tore him down—he exhibited great presence of mind by feigning death. The panther then carried him into the swamp, covered him up with sticks and grass, after which he took his leave in search of more prey. Our hero, after the panther's departure, arose and made his escape home. He was badly torn—two of his jaw-teeth were bitten out, and many wounds were inflicted.

But he was not thus to die, for he soon recovered, and very soon after his recovery gave his step-father a severe whipping and left him. Excepting another slight shock by lightning, his path was smooth, until nineteen, when he became enamored of a young lady; though figuring in a higher sphere, his superior in intellect and family, yet she was smitten by the boy of misfortune, and resolved to marry him, notwithstanding the opposition of her relatives, who made severe threats against our hero. But what cared he, who had successfully battled against rattlesnakes, panthers, and even the high power of heaven, for the threats of man. Nothing daunted, he continued to urge his claims, after finding all his efforts or a compromise unavailing, he commenced a determined course. He procured his license, placed a magistrate at a conspicuous point in the woods, and proceeded himself on foot, to the house that sheltered her whom he loved—secretly [illegible] the door of her chamber, and conducted her [illegible] miles through the woods to the place of [illegible].

Before [illegible] the place upon which the hymeneal altar had been temporarily erected, illuminated by the [illegible] of lightwood knots and the pale rays of the [illegible] alone, our hero fell into his former path of bad luck, for he was bitten by a moccasin snake; but he was too well [illegible] to snake bites to suffer that occurrence to retard his progress at such a momentous crisis, and like a brave and undaunted boy, pressed his course, and, in accordance with his anticipations, was lawfully married, about 12 or 1 o'clock at night. His moccasin bite did not long keep him in bed, for he then possessed a sense of [illegible]. After final recovery, he carried his wife to the house which he had provided for her, hoping that his cup of misfortune was then full, and that he would then enjoy that bliss attending a marriage life.

But he was not destined long to enjoy that repose which he [illegible] sought. He soon became [illegible] in a quarrel with one Mr. Wheeler, the result was—Wheeler was killed, and our hero after regular trial in a court of justice, was convicted of manslaughter; and now, at the age of twenty, has gone, leaving his wife and [illegible] babe, and his sweet home, to the penitentiary, there to be incarcerated [illegible] dismal walls for the space of three years [illegible] which to him must be long! long! Who [illegible] contemplate his past life and not say, surely [illegible] in the child of misfortune. Has his [illegible] ended! Alas! who can tell? That fact [illegible] by the dark curtain of futurity.

Queer Scenes.

Some of the New York papers pity the South. Here is a picture, from the Journal of Commerce, which would excite the sympathy of the meanest slave:

A number of hotels and restaurants make a practice of distributing the fragments of food collected from the tables, to the poor, at regular hours, every afternoon. By observing how this is done, any curious person can readily obtain some insight into the miseries of the city. By the same process, a partial one may be had to the so called "mysteries" of New York, which have always afforded a prolific theme for scribblers. The place where these are to be dispensed, is indicated some time in advance by the throng of wretched looking people who eagerly crowd around, with baskets, aprons, &c., in which to bear away the expected gifts. The bloated inebriate, tottering creatures enfeebled by disease, as well as many young girls, acting as agents for others who remain in their own garrets and cellars,—all are represented. On the first appearance of the provisions, which form a complete chowder of bread, meats, pastry, lobster, fish and vegetable, a general rush is made which has often to be forcibly repelled. With a large scoop, broken plate, or something of the kind, a quantity of the mixture is thrown into each vessel or other receptacle extended to receive it, with all possible rapidity,—the crowd meanwhile pressing closer and closer, until again forced into the back ground. Every device is resorted to, in order to secure a double portion. A common trick is, to have a basket placed one side, into which each fresh instalment is deposited, until no more can be procured. Another will have a capacious apron or bag suspended from the waist, secure from observation, while the contents of the extended basket or dish are slyly thrust into it unnoticed. Some, in this manner obtain the lion's share, while the weak, sick or decrepid, are turned off empty. The scene would bear to be transferred to canvas with an artist's pencil.

A scene of another kind occurred recently in Philadelphia. It is as remarkable as the above, and is described as follows:

On Monday, an old and highly respectable gentleman, while passing along the street, became bewildered by a rush of blood to the head, staggered and fell. Several young rowdies in the neighborhood saw him, and supposing him to be drunk, seized him, and putting a cord around his neck, began to drag him through the streets. The poor man seized the cord and winding it round his thumbs and fingers, could only prevent it from choking him to death. At this juncture two men, one a father of one of the boys came up, and would you believe it, took hold of the rope and dragged him along, calling him a "drunken old fool." The old man was finally released, not, however, until his thumb was cut through to the flesh. And all this happened on a bright morning in the proud city of Philadelphia.

☞ The Newbarry Sentinel of the 16th instant, says:

"Gold has been discovered in this district, on a plantation about 18 miles from here, owned by N. A. Hunter, an enterprising citizen of this place. Several fine specimens have been discovered on the surface. It is probable that a gentleman well known for his energy will commence operations shortly to test the richness of the mine. We wish them success, and trust that they may be amply repaid, by gathering quantities of the shining ore. The more money the better for us. It brings in advertising, it extends the circulation of papers, it infuses life into even listless people, and it gives subscribers and debtors the wherewith to settle up accounts. Citizens search your soils, for there's many a mine of gold hereabouts, that has lain undiscovered for years, which if found, would place you, like Dorn, among the millionaires of the day. Go ahead, gentlemen, beat up your gold mines."

EXTRAORDINARY PISTOL.—The London correspondent of the Boston Traveller writes thus: "I have just been shown a rifle pistol, invented by an English gentleman, residing at Ratisbon, and which is destined to make as great a revolution in that arm as the minie-rifle in musketry. It can kill at 300 yards. Last week it was tested before experienced officers at Woolwich, and completely stood the trial. Since then it has been exhibited to Prince Albert, and from my own observations, I can vouch for the efficiency of this extraordinary weapon. It is easily charged, and has sights regulated at 200, 300, 400 and 500 yards. It is, besides, light and beautiful. Only fancy a revolver of this description, with six or eight barrels, a good marksman, and an adversary a quarter of a mile off. The whole depends on the rifle groove."

UNEXPECTED ELEVATION.—The vicissitudes of human life are very strange. In 1830, President Taylor, then a Colonel in the army, wrote a letter to Gen. McNiel, who had just been appointed Surveyor of Boston, from which we make the following extract:

"I am fully aware that it is impossible for us to pursue any profession—particularly that of arms—for fifteen or twenty years, without forming strong attachments to it in various ways, and, of course, must abandon them with considerable reluctance, but there are circumstances which should reconcile us to doing so, and to justify us, not only in our own eyes, but that of the community. Could I get a civil appointment as respectable, with half the emolument attached to it as there is to the one you have received, and where I could be located so as to superintend the education of my children, I would resign forthwith; for, after serving twenty-two years and upwards in the army, all of which time on duty, with the exception of a few months, without being stationed two years together at any one post during that time, I begin to think that I need repose, but as I do not possess influence enough to procure a civil appointment of any grade, I consider my doom fixed."

Here is a plain, modest officer of the U. S. army who, in 1830, expressed a sincere wish that he could retire from his labors upon some office with half the emolument that General McNiel received, and declared that he did not possess influence enough to procure a civil appointment; and yet this same man became a world-renowned General, and President of the United States, in less than twenty years from that time.—Portland, State of Maine.

THE UNITED STATES.—Here are some statistics that must prove both instructive and suggestive to the curious of either side of the Atlantic.

The thirty-one states, nine territories, and District of Columbia, comprising the United States of America, contain a population at the present time of 25,000,000, of whom 21,000,000 are whites. The annual value of its agricultural productions is $2,000,000,000. Its most valuable product is Indian corn, which yields annually $400,000,000.

"The amount of its registered and enrolled tonnage is 4,407,010 tons. The amount of capital invested in manufacture is $600,000,000. The amount of its foreign imports in 1853, was $267,978,647 and of exports, $230,976,157. The annual amount of its internal trade is $6,000,000,000. The annual value of the products of labor (other than agricultural) is $1,500,000,000. The annual value of the incomes of its inhabitants is $1,000,000,000. The value of its farms and live stock is $5,000,000,000. Its mines of gold, copper, lead and iron are among the richest in the world. The value of the gold produced in California is $100,000,000 per annum. The surface of its coal fields is 133,132 square miles. Its receipts for customs, lands, &c., in 1853 was $61,337,574, and its expenditures, $43,543,263. Its national domain consists of 2,174,188 square miles of land. Its national debt is but $50,000,000. The number of its banks, at the present time, is about 1,100 with a capital of $300,000,000. Within her borders are 81,000 schools, 6,000 academies, 234 colleges and 3,800 churches. Only one in twenty-two of its white inhabitants is unable to read and write, and nineteen of its twenty one millions of white inhabitants are native born. Its mountains are among the highest, and its prairies are among the most beautiful and extensive upon the globe."

A FARM ONE HUNDRED AND FIFTY MILES LONG.—The Bath (Eng.) Chronicle gives an amusing description of a novelty in agriculture: A farm one hundred and fifty miles long may not perhaps be anything remarkable in Australia or America, but in England it is a rare occurrence; yet such is the fact, and farthermore, there is no other farm in Great Britain with every inch of which the public is better acquainted. The owner, or rather the renter of this farm, is Mr. Brotherhood, of Chippenham, the contractor. This gentleman has an engagement for keeping the permanent way or rails of the Great Western in repair, and he rents at the same time all the land on both sides of the line, slopes, &c., belonging to the company. In some places between the line and fence there may be twenty yards; in other spots it is not more than six feet, but all equally constitutes Mr. Brotherhood's farm, which, however narrow, is literally one hundred and fifty miles long, and through its whole length, whether in grass or arable is well, and we have heard, profitably kept by a Mr Brotherhood, who has risen by his own industry from originally being a workman on the line, and whose enterprise is only equalled by his kindness and liberality to those whom he employs and others. He has a factory at Chippenham, where he employs 300 men."

FEMALE BARBERS.—As to any pleasure there may be in being shaved, we have never seen it recorded, except, indeed, by a writer who thus discourses of its performance by barberesses:

We have also been shaved by lovely young damsels in Italy; and there, we think, is the only place to experience a truly luxurious shave. The young lady's operation is so pleasant as she manipulates your chin with her soft hand, immersed in creamy lather, and her action is so fairy-like and graceful, that you feel almost inclined to wish that, like Garagantua, in Rabelais, one had ten chins. The charming maiden, too, beguiles your attention during the whole time by her delicious converse—and only think of having your nose pulled by a handsome dark-eyed girl—every glance beaming with spiritual fire, and darting forth a heart-slaughterer.

QUICK DIGESTION—HEALTHY FOOD.—Of all the articles of food, boiled rice is digested in the shortest time—an hour. As it contains eight-tenths nutritious matter, it is a valuable substance for diet. Saigo and pig's feet are digested almost as quickly. Apples, if sweet and if ripe, are next in order. Venison is digested almost as soon as apples. Roasted potatoes are digested in half the time required by the same vegetables boiled, which occupy more than 3½ hours—more than beef or mutton.—Bread occupies 3½ hours—stewed oysters and boiled eggs are digested in 3½ hours—an hour more than is required by the same articles raw. Turkey and geese are converted in 2½ hours—an hour and a half sooner than chicken—Roasted veal, pork, and salted beef, occupy 5½ hours—the longest of all articles of food.—Scientific American.

☞ [illegible] was a special election for an Al[illegible] the other day. In the morning [illegible] but one known candidate, but [illegible] Mr. E. J. Halsey, a quiet, re[illegible] who never wanted to office, [illegible] to the astonishment of [illegible] "Know-Nothings."

Mobile Markets.

MOBILE, Sept. 1st.—There has been a fair demand for Cotton here during the last week, with sales of 3,500 bales—Middling closing at 8¼c. ☞ B. The receipts of the week embrace barely 300 bales. The exports have been 6,700. The stock on hand last evening was found by actual count to amount to 39,270 bales.

THE YACHT FLEET OF GREAT BRITAIN.—The 11 principal yacht clubs of Great Britain, says the New York Spirit of the Times, comprise 631 beautiful vessels, and employ some 4,000 of the finest seamen in the world. These yachts possess an aggregate tonnage of 29,236, and carry 1870 guns. The guns are principally of brass, from two to nine pounders. All the yachts are provided, also, with small arms of every description, and the crews, in most cases, are instructed in the use of them. The cost of the elegant amusement of yachting is of course enormous. The intrinsic value of the vessels alone is three quarters of a million of pounds. The annual amount of wages paid to the seamen exceeds £190,000, and the amount of outlay in provisions, clothing, and innumerable luxuries, is almost beyond the reach of credibility.

MURDER OF CAPT. STROTHER.—The St Louis Republican says:

Reports were brought to this city yesterday of the death of Capt. R. M. Strother, caused by the deliberate discharge of the contents of a gun in the hands of Capt. Harris, in command of the stern-wheel steamer Michigan. Both barrels of the gun were discharged, one of the shots taking effect in the side, and the other in the face and neck of Capt. Strother. This homicide took place on Tuesday last, on board the steamer Toledo, of which Mr. Strother was Captain. At the time, she was fast on Spring Creek Bar, near Lasalle. Mr. Strother asked Harris to get out of the way of the men who were at work at the capstan, striving to get the boat off the bar. For making this request, Capt. Strother was shot down, and died instantly. Harris made his escape. A reward of $350 is offered for him. He is described as a man about six feet high, with black hair and sandy whiskers.

Capt. Strother was well known to many of our citizens, having been a resident of this city for some fifteen years. He was always regarded as a peaceable man, and could have done nothing to provoke such an outrage. He leaves a wife and children to lament his death.

☞ A destructive fire occurred near Columbus, Ga., on the 26th ult., by which the valuable property known as the Cotton Mills, belonging to G. E. THOMAS was destroyed. Loss $10,000.

LOCAL ITEMS.

ANNIVERSARY CELEBRATION.—Yesterday being the anniversary of the death of General Lopez, the Church of St. Louis was thronged at an early hour, and a grand mass was said and sung for the repose of his soul. Hundreds were present, who, when he was alive, admired the unbending integrity and devoted patriotism of the departed hero, and whose own friends and relatives were sacrificed in the cause to which he became a martyr. Many were the prayers offered up, and among the orisons for future bliss, the hope that the bloodshed in the cause of Cuban liberty was not wholly vain, found vent in the fervent breathings of "a still small voice."

In the evening too there was a patriotic meeting at the Mechanics' Hall, in memory of the honored dead, and among the ceremonies of the occasion, the dirge and mournful reminiscent music had a prominent part. There were several addresses in Spanish, but to those who were better acquainted with the English tongue, the chief attraction of the evening, was the eulogy pronounced by Mr. Thrasher on General Lopez, and those who fell with him in a vain endeavor to rid "the gem of the Antilles" from the tyranny of the Spanish yoke.

FIRST DISTRICT.

COOL THEFT.—Catherine Gorman is to be examined on the 6th inst., on a charge of having stolen a lump of ice, weighing 50 pounds, from Brant & Co.'s Ice cart, while it was standing for a minute or so at the corner of Poydras and St. Peter streets.

In the last mentioned case the officer acknowledged that the fault was his.

INQUEST.—An inquest was held yesterday on the body of a little boy, named Joseph Bartlett, who was accidentally drowned by falling into a cistern well in the yard of premises on Moreau street. Verdict—"Accidentally drowned." Deceased was born in Louisiana, and was about seven years of age.

Another inquest was held on the body of a white man, name unknown, found in the river in front of the Red Stores. Verdict—"Found drowned." Deceased was a small man dressed in cottonades. His hair and complexion were light, and he was about 25 years of age.

[illegible] the oyster vendor procured the arrest of the swallower as a cheat and swindler, and he now awaits a hearing before Recorder Seuzeneau.

"MEDICINES OF GREAT VALUE." This is the term applied to STABLER'S ANODYNE CHERRY EXPECTORANT and DIARRHŒA CORDIAL, by sixteen of the best apothecaries in Baltimore—gentlemen acquainted with the skill and care used in their preparation. Praise from such a source is proof of the intrinsic merits of these "good medicines." In Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Bronchitis, Croup, and Consumption in its incipient stages, Stabler's Anodyne Cherry Expectorant is recommended with confidence; and for Diarrhœa and affections of the bowels generally, the Diarrhœa Cordial has as strong claims upon the confidence of the community. In those diseases named, both those valuable medicines have achieved an enviable reputation for their curative properties. See descriptive pamphlets, to be had gratis of the agents. Price of each, only 50 cents per bottle, or six bottles for $2 50. E. H. STABLER & CO., Proprietors, Wholesale Druggists, Baltimore.

BILIOUS DISORDERS.
For tendency to Bilious Disorders, Fever and Ague and badly treated Fever and Ague, the evil effects of Quinine and other drugs, after a long fit of sickness, Dr. Geoghegan's Hydropiper has a wonderful restorative action upon the stomach, removing all Rheumatic Pains, heaviness, languor, pain in the head, face and teeth, dropsy of the feet and legs, coldness of the body and limbs, cold sweat, nausea, hunger for meat, palpitation of the heart, great weakness, pain in the small of the back, headache, buzzing in the ears, heat about the head and face, dry skin, sallow complexion, liveness, anguish and pressure in the pit of the stomach, falling off of the hair; inflamed sore eyes, scurf around the mouth, excessive sensitiveness to the weather, nervous debility and excitement, rheumatic pains, dropsical symptoms, disgust of life.

Weak and Delicate Children.
For weak and delicate children, of a feeble and scrofulous constitution, with weak and disordered stomachs, afflicted with imperfect digestion and want of appetite, this is the most natural, simple and useful remedy that can possibly be employed. Many children considered scrofulous and consumptive, are not really so; their disease consists chiefly in a disordered state of the digestive organs. The Hydropiper enables them to digest and convert into good blood the proper quantity of food, and they are speedily nourished and strengthened in a remarkable manner. The morbid condition of the bowels, which exists in such cases, is removed, and health and vigor, the natural results.
