SUMMARY LAWS.

Summary laws permitting debtors of those states to discharge their indebtedness expire on the 1st of January. New York we believe is the only state in which the summary laws are liable which will be in force for a year to come. In Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, and Iowa, the laws are repealed. In Michigan, Wisconsin, and Minnesota, they will be in force for a year to come. In Illinois, Iowa, and Minnesota, the laws are repealed by the Legislature, but the repeal does not take effect until the next session of the Legislature, which will be in the year 1857. In Ohio, the laws are repealed, but the repeal does not take effect until the next session of the Legislature, which will be in the year 1858. In Indiana, the laws are repealed, but the repeal does not take effect until the next session of the Legislature, which will be in the year 1859.
