During this nine day's residence, what service did he render to the American people! The hen artful council from the fact. As European Secretary is satisfied; and we surely ought not Min. ors, being the werable with their heads for to be anxious about this great affair. We are What the king, their master, may from the throng told it is a matter exclusively within the compecocharanicate to his Lords and Commons, will tency of the Executive; and, therefore, it is, not suffer any speech but of their own contriving presume, considered, that the Representatives of to be thus communicated: so, the adroit minist the people have no other vocation but to vote the ters of our cabinet, taking shelter under the ex- promised and required compensation. Was it not prudent to remove this star of maliin influence to another sky! It has been done: and the nation most pay, not for a mission made therefore, we cannot dispense with this appropriation, because, if we refuse this salary, we wrought in the Department of State! Who shall defeat the mission. Should this mission, but Mr. Secretary Van Buren would have deby which no public benefit was intended, and vised such a mission, or selected such a man to from which none can be hoped, be recalled, it fill it, or caused such a printed paper to be sent may be replaced by one of better purpose, and efficient character. It is an obstruction in the straight forward" path of our relations with Russia, and we are laboring to abute, or to remove it out of the way.

Our relations with that Government are truly important.—That Empire is perhaps the most numerous in population, and certainly the most extensive in territory of any power on the Globe. No nation of the old world, otherwise than by olonies, approaches so near to us. This people is advancing in civilization, wealth, and power, beyond any example in its former history. In the ust confrorcesy of arms, between Russia and the Ottoman Empire, had not other powers of Europe interposed a shielding hand, the Mon-lem, after a dominion of more than four centu-ries in the fairest part of Europe, had been driven beyond the Bosphprus; and the Autocrat of Russia would have ascended the throne of Coustantine. At all times, our relations with such a power must be imported to the American peo-ple. Are those relations taken care of now, as heretofore they have been, and as now especially they ought to be!

Yes, sir, I say as now they should be. For now harope is contribed, and agreeted from the Mediterranea: to the Baltic.—The flame of war is but just repressed. Troops are called into the in Simost every nation, and Russia, in a kind of winter campaign, has sent our 200,000 soldiers to her south-Western truntier, to look out on the old battle fields of Belgium and France, In this condition of Europe, do we not require an able, a diligent, a resident numster of Russia. Withhold this appropriation; aboush this sine cure legation, and this may be effected.

One other fact, in the lastory of our diplomacy, renders the residence of a same, a faithful minu ter at that court, at this time, above all others, indispensable. We learn from the Department of State, through, the same medium, this mes ange, that a treaty of nunty and commerce line been negounted between the United States and the Bublime Porte. The Secretary, with great condor, told us what the Turk had agreed to do for the Christian; but he, with great caution, concealed what the christian had agreed to do for the Turk. This gentleman is as well persuaded as the Pronch advanch Was, that " knows not how to dissemble, knows not how t rule." Rumor has ruli cioun counter to Mr. Van Buren: for though she often teds more than the truth, she never tells less. What have we tearned from this witness? Whe truly that a secret article is contained in this westy, and this tree wis, I believe, 11! shed in the newspaper, below we received the message. It is said, it is beneved, that by tills article the American people agree to farnish armed ships to the Sul ian of Turkey, in his inture wars with christian nations. Do you buileve, air, that our Envoy had left Constantinopte before the Russian min inter at the Porte knew this fact! The very Drutoman, by whom your sir. Is kind talked with Reis Littendi would for half a plate full of pias-sia! Who shall make our explanation, if we news of this treaty, and perhaps a copy of it, ter our Minister left that city. The shortness of his residence there, the suddenness of his departions of Europe, all giving dreaded note of preto place our relation, with Lussia on a tooting not the most firm and friendly. Does not sound policy-does not national good sense call on the American people to have an able Minister at that court, and that too, right specifiy? Have we one there now? Under the mission for which this appropriation is to be made, are we likely soon, or ever, I do not say to have such a man here, but to have there any Minister at all? In answer to all these anxious forebodings, we are told, that in this absence of the Minister, the Secretary of Legation takes very sectal and sutisflictory care of our selations at the court of St. Petersburgh. If this were not too judicrous, if must be received as a mere mockery of the American people. When this paragraph came from under his pen, Mr. Sperctary Van Buren musi, if he had placed his hand there, have felt some thing on his face different from the eternal smile.

Who is this Secretary of Legation, the protegre of the Minister, John Randolph Clay? A lad of less, or derianly not more than twenty-one years old; undistinguished by talents, education, or employment, without acquaintance with men, or things; or business. A youth to when fame has not, nor have his friends at ributed any thing extraordinary, ei her in possession or promise; and with nothing but his sir-name to reccommend him to public attention. I would not, I connect speak in derogation of this youth; and all I would say is, that he must be utterly unqualified for the public station where he is placed. The service requires men; the nation has able men. why then hazard our interests, perhaps our peace, by placing the weight of Empires on the mender shoulders of Boyhood?

Let us strike out the appropriation, that this sinecure, this state mission, may be avoided . that the Minister may return to his "constituents," the Secretary to his studies: and that the PRES-IDEN'T may send a Legution to Russia fit for the public service.

As it will not be contended that this appropriation should be made, because the gentleman, who may take the benefit of it, is a native of Virginia, so may gentleman, be assured that these remarks have no sectional origin; and I utterly discusion any, and all adversary feeling to that distinguished Commonwealth, her interests, and her cite zens. I have spoken as one of the representative of the American people; and as one, coming from a part of our common country, which has don and will do as much for the illestrious men a Virginia, as any other part withis nation. The appropriation is opposed, because it is intended to apport a mission, formed for purposes uncon nected with the public interests, places our for eign relations in peril, and is without any justifcution in law, usage, or constitutional principal
