

THE BEE

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED BY JEROME HAYON, DELAWARE CO

NEW-ORLEANS, FEBRUARY 17, 1831

The Northern and Eastern Mail had been received at the Post Office, at the usual hour of closing; consequently there was another failure.

The late hour at which the Courier of yesterday fell in our way, prevented a notice in our paper this day, of that part of it which might seem so curious to our readers.

CHARGE ANSWERED.—The incident state of the weather of late has induced us to delay a response to this great picture, well knowing that a comfortable home and fire side would be preferred by most of our citizens to the endurance of a northern frost or the dripping rain.

(From the Natchez.) Another week has passed over our heads, and yet no Northern mail has arrived, and to forbear comment upon the occasion, and not add our just complaint to that something from every quarter, in regard to their irregularity or rather their non-arrival, would be to commit a palpable breach of duty to the public.

Under the following article on this subject from the Kennebecian, we have not been forward in making our complaint against the Post Office. We entered our protest in the most decided terms, against carrying into that department, the practice of prescription for opinion's sake; but we are unwilling to believe that men so corrupt would be put into office as would venture to interfere with the regular transmission of intelligence, or as would seriously interrupt the regular flow of our correspondence.

MR. ADAMS AND GEN. JACKSON. It is well known to the nation, that Gen. Jackson's arrival at Washington previous to his inauguration, he refused to pay the customary visit to Mr. Adams, the then President, and thus, contrary to the wishes of well bred gentlemen of the Jackson party. It was said and believed at the time, he was ruled in this disrespectful business by the Washington Journal.

It is our northern friends have been visited with weather proportioned to the which we have experienced within a day or two, their snow storm of the middle of January will diminish into insignificance, in comparison with that of the beginning of February.

From the North Gazette. THE HARTFORD CONVENTION. A regular session of the Hartford Convention at the residence of Mr. B. M. SHERMAN, one of the members of the Hartford Convention, was put under way, and under the presidency of PERJURY gave a history of the proceedings of that famous meeting.

Question by the Prisoner. What is the object of the Convention to withdraw and paralyze the Government of the United States in the prosecution of the war with Great Britain? Answer. It was not. Nothing of the kind was done or contemplated by this Convention, or for so I know or believe, by those who were its originators. On the contrary, it is the object was a more effectual co-operation in that in the presence of large and respectable audiences, composed of men of both political parties interested in the question, and all seemed to have come to about the same conclusion in regard to it.

Previous to the trial of Whittier. Messrs. Sherman and Goddard, of New York, who gave a brief notice in your last number, the prisoner moved the court for a subpoena, to Mr. Sherman, of Fairfield. Mr. Goddard, of Norwich, and many others, as witnesses in his behalf. It was allowed by the court, and was served on Mr. Sherman, but could not be, seasonably, on Mr. Goddard, on account of the lateness of his application.

Whittier's Motion. What was the nature and object of the Hartford Convention? Answer. I was a member of that Convention. It met on the 15th of December, 1814. The United States were then at war with Great Britain. They had, in their arms, twenty-seven thousand effective men—of these a few hundred only were employed in New-England. The war had been in operation two years and a half. We had also about a million of 700 miles to protect, and with the exception of about a hundred men, had not the aid of any military force from the United States.

as to the defence of the New England States. Question by the Prisoner. Has not that convention been generally reputed in the United States to be treasonable?

Much has been said and published to that effect, but without the least foundation. I believe I know their proceedings perfectly, and that every measure, done or proposed, has been published to the world. No one act has ever been pointed out, to my knowledge, as inconsistent with their obligations to the United States, nor was any such act ever contemplated, by them.
