This the Administration plainly saw; and so, without waiting to take our disbelief of the existence of a fa tylredoubtable gentleman a place in the Boston Custom House. Undoubtedly they would have been glad to buy his silence by a found sum out of the contingent fund; but to that burgain he would not consent. They had endeavored to ruin his character by turning him out of office and accusing him of dishonesty, and he, like a man of spirit, was resolved, that they should give him an appointment as a certificate of his being previously expressed, and stated that we had rendered that we had complete. Unfit as they thought him to come in contact with the letters of a Post office, he is now holding, under them and in spite of them, an office, which probably requires him to handle more of the money of the Government than any

COMMERCIAL.

From Wille's Commercial report of Feb. 19. GENERAL REMARKS,—The Mississippi has risen since our last, and was yesterday noon at five feet below ordinary high water mark. The weather, during the fore part of the week, was wet and untavorable for outdoor pusiness; since when, it became dry, clear and pleasant; so much so as to indicate the breaking up of winter, in which the western traders and many interested have much at stake, as remards fears and hopes respecting their consignments and speculations for this end of the market near the outlet of the grand canal of nature, (the Mississippi and its tributary streams;) and particularly so at the present moment, when in a few days it is expected, that all the boats of every description, detained by ice in the Ohio river will be liberated, and arrive in a short time with full cargoes of produce. The market generally, with the exception of a decline in Flour, has met with but few variations since our last.

COTTON.—The sales during the last seven days, ending yesterday, are estimated (by those who ought to know) at suil ten thousand bales of Louisiana and Mississippi, and at nearly the price of last week, without any improvement on hose rates. We are inclined to believe that the demand has been good, and using the Liverpool classification, for this description we quote
