From the Charity Hospital's Report. Charles Tims, admisted on Monday 29th of Aug. having all the symptoms necessary to constitute the disease of Yellow Fever, and was treated as such; and died on Saturday evening at 8 o'clock, and on the Post Mortem examination, the case of Yellow Fever is confirmed.

There were, on Saturday last, 240 patients in the Charity Hospital, to wit: 219 males and 21 females. The burials in the Protestant burying-ground were, during last week, only fourteen in number. We have not been able to ascertain the number of deaths among the Catholics, but understood that there have not been many.

. We have witnessed with pleasure the exhibition of a beautiful model of a steam-engine, in actual operation. The owner and maker, Mr. Risingson, has in this instance linked the ad vantages of a steam-locomotive with the improversent of a complete apparatus for the extinguishing of fire. The volume of water susceptible of being thrown by this engine, if we consider the proportionate dimensions of the model, must be immense, and the efficacy of the apparatus, in cases of conflagration, cannot but be evident to the least observing.
