

THE BEE

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED DAILY BY J. B. WILSON, NEW ORLEANS, THURSDAY MORNING, OCTOBER 27, 1831.

From Monday next the BEE will appear daily.

Our harbour is rapidly taking its wonted activity; vessels from the northern and foreign ports are daily coming in, and together with them, our friends, who had absent themselves during the summer, and strangers, who flock in against the commercial season.

Friday's mail brought New-York papers of the 14th, Washington of the 14th, and Charleston of the 18th. The contents of the former are rather of the Cincinnati have already been laid before our patrons. By the Samuel Wright, at Charleston, the editor of the Mercury has been part in the preparation of Liverpool papers of the 22d of September. Their import is the same as that of the news contained in the New-York papers.—Letters from Liverpool by the Samuel Wright state, that the British Act, imposing the duty on Cotton, had received the Royal assent on the 22d August, but it had not gone into operation as late as the 22d September at Liverpool.

The barque London, reported to be at anchor out side the bar, is probably the one which was taking in cargo at Liverpool on the 2d of Sept: she will consequently bring late news.

CRIST JUSTICE MARSHALL has been visited upon by a committee of young gentlemen, as organs of the feelings of a numerous and respectable meeting of young men of the city and county of Philadelphia. We delight in noticing this circumstance, in which age, patriotism, talent and virtue are honored by the young and promising of our land.

Thirteen M. S. copies of Walter Scott's novels were lately laid under the hammer at Mr. Evans's, Fall-Hall, and brought the aggregate sum of $216 4c! Of the thirteen manuscripts the Monastery was the only autograph.

We learn from the Boston papers, that a Turkish coffee or tutor, had embarked on board the Mermaid on a journey of instruction to this country. A sudden illness of this missionary of learning compelled captain Phelps to put him back in the port of Smyrna. He may be neglected, says captain Phelps, by the first vessel. Our fellow-citizens of the north will have an opportunity of feasting their curiosity on the outlandish appearance of a bearded Turk.

Royal Melomania.—The King of Bavaria has lately composed a military cantata, a species of musical philippic, against France & the King; the cantata was performed in the Theatre of Munich in presence of the accepted minister.

We have received files of Jalapa papers, up to the 5th of October. They contain little that can immediately interest our readers. The federal government have been authorized to contract for a new loan of two millions dollars. The following paragraph, from a Vera Cruz paper of the 22th of September, we submit to the judgment of our readers; while we confess that, as it is, its import is not exactly intelligible in as much as we have no prior data to judge of its correctness:

The Courier from the interior has arrived, every thing continues in a great state of tranquillity, with this exception only, if letters, which we have seen, can be relied upon,—that dark rumors are abroad in Mexico, which impair confidence and awake suspicion. Why this new loan of two millions of dollars? What can be the object of a movement of troops which has been announced? Are they to occur in the establishment of sanitary measures? Peace, blessed peace! heaven forbid that thou shouldst be disturbed!

The days of divination are gone by; we have no kind of agency to assist us in unraveling mystical difficulties; we are, therefore, at a loss to account for the enigmatic forebodings of the Mexican editors. The mining works have been generally and actively resumed, and promise most beneficial results in various localities. Iron mines, yielding abundant ore, have been discovered, north of the city of Durango, in the state of that name, and are now being explored with satisfactory success. There is an exemption of duties, for the space of ten years, granted by the Mexican Congress, for all iron extracted from those mines. The establishment of a large factory, in the neighbourhood of Mexico, is in contemplation.

THE MEETING OF WRITS. Having been for some time absent from the bustle and occupation of the town, in performing my private duties, as one of the signers at Snooksburg, no time has been allotted to engage in the angry and contentious broils of the higher classes of genius—the desperate antagonists—the myself and lower four bourgeois—deeming myself sufficiently invigorated by my late absence, and being allowed a fortnight from the elastic occupation of catching oysters and catfish, there is some determination, with your leave, Mr. Bee, to tread the arena of disputation.

Success, as I think, has attended my efforts, the great exchange has fallen, and been blown into "airy nothing," the great exploit, the majestic idea; the prolific source of Commerce, has gone to the "fourth of the apples." Thus far, thus well for the laborer of one of the family of the Snooks. You know well enough, Mr. Bee, that there is a class of mankind, with whom to reason, would be casting pearls before swine; but to apply the lash of sarcasm, the broiling of ridicule, or the cold water of irony;—is with these to you effect every just purpose. As hitherto we have been rather injudicious in their efforts at fun; nothing thinking that some could joke, or jest, or sneer with at least equal bitterness.

As there appears to be some doubt as to the identity of J. Snooks, Jr; let me give you a description of the personage. From the earth to the atmosphere, he reaches about 5 feet. The dimensions of his body are none of the bulkiest; but his complexion is nearly on a half of his height. You are advised that he is a resident of Snooksburg, and lives by the preparation of oysters, and fish, and belongs to that ancient fraternity who reside at the Pile des Catalans, from time out of mind. My girl is rather slow; and like old Grimes, my "old grey coat is buttoned down before." A large dark beaver compass, and yields ungrudgingly to my temples, which, together with a heavy pair of boots, sets off and terminates my person and its disposition. There would have been no use of alluding to my person, were it not, like Addison, with his bigger do's, "Convent, who killed him, but whom might not meet him, my conspicuous person is presented to the numerous foreigners nightly in port on the public. You have doubtless heard, that our national air, "Yankee Doodle" was first sung in honor of our nation, by a British Doctor at Boston, in the early time of the Revolution.

But, what also, to the attention of our friends, Lord Cornwallis surrendered his army to Americans playing the same, "Yankee Doodle." The garter of the Dutchess of Salisbury, falling in the company of the King of England, first occasioning a burst of ridicule, at length was the origin of the order of the "Knights of the Garter," with this respectful motto "Honi soit qui mal y pense." What is the moral or upshot of all this?

My object in your attention, Mr. Bee, was to describe the performance, oral and panimimic, of a meeting of wits, which had assembled, since my last publication, and my present one. The subject was of course "Snooks"; "Snooksburg"; "Snooks"; the personages were Tommy Dramatic, who sang something of the stage, John Politicus, a great spouter of political poetry, who writes verses, Jenny Exchange, who writes verses, Napoleon Wellington, a duellist, and O. P. Q. Lotowner, a man of great parts, together with "mille ides in unum furta."

O. P. Q. Lotowner took the chair, and called on Mr. Exchange to furnish his quota of wit, and Snooksburg. Then spoke Mr. E.—Dr. Sir, according to your account I am indebted to you for a balance of wit, on the account between us of "Snooksburg"—I regret the difference of a clear adjustment of accounts between us, and that very important subject; but your memorandum should inform you, that in consequence of the want of celebrat capital, I could not myself fill up my stock; therefore, you will excuse your obedient Jenny Exchange.

The hall was stilled upon the finishing of the orator. A sensation ran through the audience that Hancock had appeared among them. But Peter Politicus, under the inspiration of Lord Byron's "Holland Scheidan Goddess," sed himself exultant. Fair music how oft on Snooksburg have I talked Poetic notions of much magniloquence Oh! Gods, are we now to be talked Raise the waters of Borneo and Poncebrain; Fill Bayou Steamer with mud And drive out Snooksburg banish and chine— Or else we are gone for good. Applause, clappings, bravos succeeded this burst of Parnassian poetry. Peter looked redder than a rose, or the gills of a Turkey cock for a few moments. But Mr. Politicus thought proper to address the meeting, after an exordium in which Adams, Clay, Jackson, Calhoun, came in for applause on abuse, he began to utter a few sentences on the question before them. To abbreviate it would be criminal; hereafter, I promise to publish it, as it will afford many views, just found out of the lack of sense in our politicians.

Mr. Dramatic then, like old Bottom, "roared, and roared like a lion," until, Mr. Lotowner had to apprise him and to inform that the music would not serve; but, said he, we will now your production and promise you something. Upon a sudden, N. W. Politician arose, "Mr Lotowner I challenge you to mortal combat!—I mean Snooks wherever I find them. No man shall talk of Snooksburg in my presence." Then rose Mr. Lotowner. "Gentlemen you have done pretty well; all your speeches, poetry, romances, challenges, shall be taken down in short hand and published. The arguments of the wise must not be "hid under a bushel." You have much wisdom. Thank ye Gentlemen, I'm a busy man; no time to talk; have to go to speculate; meet again, yours in haste.

Such are, Mr. Bee, the performances of the assembly of wits, pregnant with fire, at least against my person and my occupation. Time, of folding reflection, will afford comment. JOSEPH SNOOKS JR. [From the New York Mercantile Advertiser.] In a Nassau, N. P. paper of the 14th Sept. we find some particulars of the brig Henry, March 2nd, hence for the Galveston, Texas, which was taken possession of by H. M. Schur, Kungaroo, on the Istanna Bank. The crew of the brig, passengers and crew. The circumstance has been magnified in several quarters, into an insult on the American flag. The case appears to be, that the Captain being in a constant state of intoxication, the vessel was nearly wrecked several times, and in consequence the people on board were in hourly fear. On being boarded by an officer of the kangaroo, the crew of the Henry was found in a most filthy state of intoxication, and the vessel among the rocks, drifting into great danger, it was then that the request above alluded to was made, the mate not considering himself competent to navigate the vessel in that part of the West Indies. The kangaroo, having the Henry in charge, arrived at Havana on the 24th of August. The case being laid before the American Consul there, he imposed the Captain's cause, and remitted him in command of the vessel, notwithstanding the remonstrance of all on board of the Henry. The mate being about to relate the circumstances of the case, he was asked by the Consul "how he dared to take charge of an American vessel, from the master's hands, and deliver her to a foreign power?"—and without more ado, was hurried off to jail.

This is the substance of the article in the Nassau paper which concludes with a request that any editor of an American journal, who may read their statement of the affair will publish it, "that no blame may attach to the officers of the Kangaroo, by any misrepresentation that may be given by the master of the Henry." We are not now disposed to ensure the officers of the Kangaroo, when Capt. Marsden returns, he will have an opportunity of relating the affair, when the public may be able to judge impartially in the matter. We remark in Kotzebue's "New Voyage Round the World"—a jejune book on the whole—the following passage:—"Between Falkland Island and the West of Patagonia, we sailed within speaking distance of a North American Whaler. The dirty ship, and the crew smeared with blubber, had, indeed, the disgusting appearance; but if we consider to what toils and dangers these men are exposed during their voyages, which commonly last several years, in the most tempestuous seasons, sometimes sailing about for months without seeing a fish, and suffering in the manful way from the want of wholesome food, yet pursuing their object with invincible perseverance, it is impossible to deny them compassion, and even commendation. The North Americans display an industry and perseverance in their commercial undertakings, which is not exceeded even by the English; they are to be met with upon every distant part of the globe, in the most unfrequented regions, disdaining nothing, however trivial, from which they can derive profit."

In his second volume, Captain Kotzebue observes—"The North Americans are such clever sailors, that even when drunk they were capable of managing a ship"—an ambidextrous compliment.—Nat. Gaz. A private correspondence of a London paper writes from Paris, under date 28th August; "Intelligence of a decisive battle having been fought in Poland has not yet reached us; but we learn with pain and apprehension that a deputation of the representatives of the nation, have deeded their duty to proceed to the camp of the Polish Generalissimo, and demand his retirement from the command, or that he forthwith offer battle to the enemy. In any point of view, this alternative is so obviously alarming to a general observer, that the result is looked for with more feverish anxiety. Will the Russian, however, that those who ought to know the real state of the country and the sources here to fears that, great should the Polish army be routed in a general engagement."

According to authentic accounts from the Russian head-quarters, dated the 12th inst. the corps of general Kutiger, which had passed the Vistula, has approached Ladom, and pushed its advanced posts to the Filiz. The vanguard of the Russian army, commanded by general Glebov, has totally defeated a detachment of the enemy, who besides several hundred killed, lost two cannon, and 300 prisoners, among which are many officers.

The corps of Count Baron Kretz, consisting of 20,000 infantry, and 5000 cavalry, has arrived at Prasnag, and received orders to hasten its march to join the Russian main army, so as to pass on the 18th, the bridge over the Vistula at Legon. Chocz and Rychwal were occupied by the Russian troops on the 14th, and they were expected on the 15th or 16th at Kulisch. The Russian officers and members of the staff are gone to Gnestowchov. The being no Polish troops within or near Kalisch, there is nothing to hinder the entrance of the Russian troops into that town. It is said, that on the 17th, twenty Cossacks and one officer went from Kolin to occupy the frontier town of Slupetz.

Cracow, Aug. 13.—The Chamber of Deputies at Warsaw, resolved on the 9th, in a secret committee, to despatch instantly Commissioners to the grand Polish army, to inquire into the motives of the Generalissimo's inaction, and to expostulate with him on the necessity of immediately giving battle, which was called for by the unanimous wish of the people. It is added, that the Commissioners were empowered to appoint another commander-in-chief, if they thought proper, after taking cognizance of the facts. In consequence of that resolution, Prince Adam Czartoryski, Count Anthony Ostrowski, the Senator Wengryk, and the Deputies Szaski, Dombowski, Swirski, Morawski, and Count Vincent Tyskiewicz, set out for the head-quarters.
