THE BEE.

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED DAILY BY J. BAYON.

NEW-ORLEANS,
WEDNESDAY MORNING, NOVEMBER 23, 1831.

We throw ourselves upon the indulgence of our patrons, for the very uncouth appearance of our yesterday's paper. Independently of the meagre appearance of its columns, caused by the barrenness of the Northern papers: fierce defiance has been bidden against the majesty of the English language the nine parts of speech have been most vilely abused—the terror of spelling urchins, Webster and Dilworth sent to school, and poor common sense unmercifully done unto death, in the editorial department. On the latter offence there may be some doubts of the responsibility of our workmen; for we'll readily admit, that in our day,

—"We've done our best
To write as much dull nonsense as the rest" of our fraternity. But of the former we cannot assume the fatherships, nor consent to be the scapegoat, loaded with our neighbors' iniquities.

The dramatic company of Camp street Theatre begin their performances to-night. Their absence has already been felt, during our long autumnal evenings.

Few readers, but have been delighted by the Tales of the O'Hara family. Mr. Banim, the talented author of those volumes, is about, we perceive by our English files, to add another work to the stock of public entertainment. This new production, announced under the name of the Smuggler, cannot but be highly interesting, when we come to reflect on the occasional vigorous descriptions, correct delineations and pathetic dialogue which charactorize the novel-writing of the author. We gather from the announcement of the work, that the story comprises the singular adventures of an impetuous youth, of good family, driven, by the pressure of want and other calamities, to the desperate alternative of starving or ascending the perilous deck of a free-booter and roaming the waters as a captain of a smuggling lugger; the scene is said to lie on a very picturesque part of the coast in the neighborhood of Hastings. The author has interwoven in the web of his narrative, remnants of legendary traditions of a wild and extraordinary nature.

Correspondence of the BEE.

MEXICO, November 1st. 1831.

SIR:—I have striven to improve my stay, and derive information during my residence in this city; and my travels towards this capital have supplied the means of noting more than one important fact, which I may hereafter communicate; for the present it is enough that you should know that a general uneasiness extends over the whole population, tormented by a thirst of freedom, and accustomed, by protracted intestine dissensions, for more than twenty years, to the use of the most violent means in order to heave off an irksome yoke. But the closeness of discretion, which mainly characterizes the Mexican, gives but little scope for observation and I am compelled to basemy belief, on a concurrence of facts, rather than on the opinions of even those, who are the most noted for their credit and independence in the political world. Blind, however, must he be, who cannot perceive that discontent exists here, and that the ferment of popular spirit is daily increasing; the national party, numbed into inertness, by the condemnation of Guerrero, again appears in the scena. Manuel Mota a citizen, every way estimable, and more particularly so for thesoundness and independence of his principles, has lately started a new paper, El Tribuno del [illegible]icano, which inveighs with courage and [illegible]ainst the acts of an administration, [illegible]uberto, has met with no more opposition; than do the Pope's Bulls in Spain.

He has already expiated his patriotism: he has openly taxed the government with collusion with the Centralists of Yucatan; and the ministerial inquisition have ransomed his purse therefor. But fines cannot silence him, because he is powerfully backed; and his name conceals that of many an honorable and patriotic citizen, who assists him with his pen, and who will openly stand forth in the hour of struggle.

The Tribune is not the only organ of the national party: who would have believed it? The Censor of Vera Cruz, the worthy champion of the PLAN OF JALAPA, has taken hold of the charges against the Ministers, and enforces them with cogency! I must do justice to the editors of that paper: they are, I believe, devoted to Bustamante; but they are patriotic, and contend for the present form of government. These facts, borne out by the files, that I transmit, have impressed me with the belief, I may say convinced me with the certainty, that the pressidential canvass will be hotly carried on.

I hope that my forebodings may be groundless; but one fact is undeniable: you must know that according to the provisions of the constitution of Mexico, the election of a president devolves upon the respective state legislatures; now those legislatures, for the most part, elected under the influence of the General Government, are notified that any candidate, other than Bustamante or Bravo, would be prejudicial a los intereses de la Nacion Mexicana,—Prejudicial to the Mexican people. But I hope that the ministeral schemes may be defeated, and although Bustamente have attempted to gull the people with his sham improvements he will have to put up with discomfiture, his machines and manufactories to the contrary notwithstanding.—Yours &c. Z.

FIRST SECRETARY OF STATE, FOREIGN DEPARTMENT } 29TH OCT. 1831.

Under this date I communicate to the charge d' affairs in the United States of America, the following:

"H. E. the Vice President having taken into consideration the loss and detriment that commerce would sustain, in case the provisions of Art. 1st. of the circular of the 26th inst. of this department, for the actual establishment of regulations for the expedition of bills of health, were carried into effect in that country, in consideration of the distance of the Port of New-Orleans from your place of residence, H. E has been pleased to except from the measure in question the said Port; authorizing the Mexican Consul resident there, to sign and by himself alone the bills as indicated, he remaining personally responsible for the exact fulfilment of the conditions contained in the said circular. For which purpose I this day send him a copy of the same; at the same time that I transcribe the present communication."

I communicate to you the said order inclosing a copy of the circular—which is cited in order that, in your instance, you may fulfil the provisions therein contained with the most scrupulous exactitude."

FIRST SECRETARY OF STATE FOREIGN DEPARTMENT. } 26TH OCT. 1831.

May it please Y. Excellency—Your advices advices lately received both by the English packet, and by the way of the United States of America, H. E. The Vice President has learned with what rapidity the Cholera Morbus is spreading through Europe, and fully convinced of the urgent necessity of concerting direct and sufficient measures to counteract this dreadful calamity, and prevent its fatal consequences to the Republic, has considered it an imperious duty to ordain as follows:

1st. That, from the date in which it is calculated that the present regulations shall have been received and published in every port in Europe, it shall not be sufficient for the admission of vessels into the ports of the Republic, that they bring certificates or bills of health granted by Mexican consuls or vice consuls or any other local authority, unless the said documents shall have precisely approved by the Minister or Consul general residing in the capital of the country, or in its more immediate neighborhood, who according to the information of which they are in possession, shall qualify, under their own responsibility the danger that threatens the Republic, by granting or not their approval of such documents, as they may deem expedient.

2dly. That, the Mexican Consuls and superior agents shall not grant their bills of health or approval to vessels and effects proceeding from the Baltic, the commercial intercourse of their ports with those of the Republic being from this time forth suspended.

3dly. That, the said agents in expediting the said documents, not only shall inform themselves of the state of health of the vessels, but also of the place from whence the goods have been brought, absolutely refusing them to such vessels as proceed from any quarter where it is known that the epidemic prevails.

4thly. That, the moment the said epidemic extends to any port or quarter, where vessels, passengers, or effects are expedited to the Republic, bills of health shall be refused, all Mexican commerce being considered as interrupted between the said quarters or ports till such time as the cause that rendered the adoption of such measures necessary shall have entirely ceased.

5thly. That, as soon as this communication be received, the regulations contained therein be published in the journals not only of the country in which each Legation or consulate is resided, but also in the intermediate ones, for the information of all those whom it may concern, and in order that they may apply for the bills and approval provided for in article 1st.

6thly That, the measures shall remain in full effect the whole time the epidemic prevails in any country, the Government of the Republic reserving to itself the right of applying them henceforwad to sue vessels, persons, or effects as proceed from the quarters already infected or in the vicinity of the contagion—H. E. has no doubt that you will co-operate with all due vigilance and zeal in the strict fulfilment of these regulations.

God and liberty,

[From the Portland (Maine) Argus.]

The King of Netherlands has recommended that the United States should assign to Great Britain a portion of territory nearly double in extent what she asked for at the treaty of Ghent; double in extent what is necessary to accomplish all the objects which the convenience of the colonies requires. To talk to us, therefore, about her being dissatisfied, is to treat us like children. It is well known—we have it from the best authority, that in January last the British Government officially made known to the King of the Netherlands its entire satisfaction with his decision—approving the principles he had adopted in coming to that decision, and complimenting him highly for his wisdom in arriving at such a conclusion. It is true this was done in a secret and confidential manner—but it is equally true that for more than six months the Government of the United States at Washington have been in possession of the fact.

We observe by the last Detroit paper that JOHN SUNDAY, a converted Chippewa belonging to Crape Island, and who was in this city a few years ago, has recently returned to Detroit, on his way to Crape Island, in the Bay of Quinte.—This native is an ordained Minister; and has been on a visit to his Indian brethren on the shores of Lake Huron. During his tour he visited Saut St. Marie. A letter to the editor of the Detroit Journal, from Saut St. Marie, says, "that the labors of this excellent man have been wonderfully blest; about thirty Chippewas have been converted under his preaching. The Chippewas of that place have given those of the Crape Island, a piece of land on one of their small lakes, about three miles by one, for the purpose of forming an agricultural settlement. They have invited Sunday to come and preach to them next spring. These Indians have, in a Memorial to the President of the United States, asked him for a yoke of oxen and a cart, and some agricultural implements. They also ask the President to allow from their Fond du Lac an annuity, or from the general civilization fund, a small sum of money, to pay the expense of keeping a common school on the proposed cession to the Methodist Chippewas. The number of Chippewas on the ceded Island is about two hundred, who are anxiously waiting the return of Sunday."—N. Y. Commercial Adv.

Territory of Huron.—A correspondent of the Buffalo Journal gives an agreeable picture of that portion of this Territory which has been lately ceded to government by the Menomonee Indians, and in which he has just made an excursion. The tract reserved to the Indians, of 500,000 acres, is also a fine body of land, containing very extensive and fertile meadows along the Fox river, with woodlands of good timber, in which there is no underbrush. The writer proceeded thirty-eight miles from Green Bay up the Fox River to Winnebago Lake, passing rapids whose whole decent is about one hundred feet. The river is ninety yards wide, its bed a limestone rock, the banks from fifty to a hundred and fifty feet high. The water is of course adequate to move any machinery.—Doty's Island, in the outlet of the lake, contains 400 acres heavily timbered. The bank of the lake itself is covered with trees of a height and diameter indicating the nature of the soil, which is a black loam, rich and deep. The Cliff, so called, is a mountain three hundred feet above the level of the lake, presenting a picturesque prospect.—The main roads leading from Green Bay to Chicago, Wiskonsin Portage, the Lead Mines and Galena, will probably pass this point. Beyond this the mountain recedes three or four miles from the shore, forming a valley fifteen miles in length, of as fertile land as can be found in the United States; terminating to the South in a dry prairie called Cass Plains. These plains contain 25,000 acres of rich land, which are already cleared by nature for the plough; and they extend to the Manitoowoc river.—Soon after begin the prairies, which run, with scarcely any timber, to the Mississippi. In the whole distance, near a hundred miles, passed by the writer, the land seems to be of the kind and aspect just described, namely, rich prairie, with occasional growths of fine timber, equally indicative of fertility. A road from the mouth of the Fond du Lac river to Galena would be of great advantage to the mines, and a direct route for one might be followed at a trifling expense. It would facilitate the transportation of property from New York, by the Canal and the Lakes.—Baltimore American.

BARBADOES.—A letter from Barbadoes of Sept. 27, to a gentleman of this city, in referring back to the awful hurricane which swept and desolated that Island on the 11th of August, thus describes what he himself saw of the tempest:

"The wind, which blew from the north-west, continued moments to increase; then veering to the south-east, raged with a violence surpassing all description. Numbers of the inhabitants, to avoid a premature interment under the falling mansions, sought refuge in the open fields. There also, they were exposed to dangers not less dreadful than those they had quitted, for the limbs of trees, and the fragments of the falling houses, being by the violence of the wind thrown to such amazing distances, that even there they found themselves in danger of premature interment.—Mothers with their infant babes, were among the midnight wanderers. The fairest forms, stripped of their drapery by the ruthless blast, passed the dreadful period exposed to all the violence of the contending elements; while their affectionate mothers and distracted husbands, in all the agonies of sympathising tenderness, ineffectually strove to render them that assistance which in this general scene of desolation was no where to be found. The loss of lives is not yet correctly ascertained, but supposed to be about four thousand. No estimate has been made of the loss of property—in that respect we have all been general sufferers more or less, I have not time to extend my accounts further. What I have said will enable you to form some idea of the condition of the flonce ourishing Island of Barbadoes.—Ibid.

A most shocking occurrence took place on Wednesday in the caravan of wild beasts now exhibiting in Bristol. John Johnson, a Yorkshireman, was employed by Mr. Wombwell to keep watch during the night—he was a stranger, and had been only two days in the service.—The man unfortunately got intoxicated, and at seven in the morning, before the regular keepers came, foolishly undertook to shew the animals to some friends, and for this purpose removed the shutters of the den. The lion was asleep, but in order to rouse him the man put in his right hand and pulled him by the beard. This indignity Wallace resented by darting his paw into the sleeve of the coat, and speedily dragged the man against the iron bars of the cage. The enraged beast then seized his victim very near the shoulder, with both his paws, and in an instant stripped down all the flesh and skin in ribbands to the wrist so as to leave the bones almost perfectly bare, the elbow joint being also torn open. Wallace then took the mangled limb into his mouth and began to eat it, and the ill-fated wretch was only set at liberty by the animal having bitten off the bones of the arm previously to his swallowing the great mangled mass of flesh. The man was brought to the Infirmary, where a surgeon immediately amputated the limb. Johnson lay all day in a state of stupid insensibility, but we learn that great hopes are entertained that he will survive the accident. This is the same animal which fought with and killed the dogs at Warwick.—Bath Chronicle.
