

THE BEE.

TUESDAY MORNING, JUNE 16, 1852.

Eighteen sailors, charged with having assaulted and beaten the city guard, on Sunday evening, were brought up for examination before the Mayor yesterday morning. The trial was held at the city hall, and the Mayor presided. The defendants were charged with having assaulted and beaten the city guard, on Sunday evening, and were brought up for examination before the Mayor yesterday morning.

The papers from New York, by yesterday's mail, were of the evening of the 14th inst., Washington of the 6th and Charleston of the 10th.

The bill to re-charter the U. States Bank, passed by the committee of the whole, in the Senate, by a majority of two. This indicates its final passage in that body. What may be its fate in the House, it is impossible to conjecture.

The treasurer of the Asylum for the relief of destitute orphan boys, in behalf of the directors of the institution, has just issued a notice, in which he expresses his warmest acknowledgments for the generous contribution of $1000 presented by a worthy and highly respectable member of the bar.

The establishment of the Charleston City and Carolina Gazette, has passed into the hands of William Laurens Poole, ex. recy. of Char. — Wm. G. Simms, ex. recy. the late editor, being about to remove to Louisiana, as we understand.

We copy from the "New York Mercantile Advertiser," of the 24th inst., the regular boasts given by the Irving dinner, together with the speeches of Chancellor Kent, who presided on the occasion, and of the honored guest, being all for which we can make room.

The intelligence received by Sunday's mail, which is published in our paper yesterday, respecting France, is a most critical one. It is a matter of great importance to the people of this country, and we have endeavored to give a full and accurate account of the same. It is a matter of great importance to the people of this country, and we have endeavored to give a full and accurate account of the same.

By this arrival, contrary to our expectations, we have no intelligence of the commencement of the struggle for empire between the Portuguese, Brazils, and Miguel. The spectacle is a melancholy one, to contemplate. The brothers are arrayed against the brothers—the mother of the nation is arrayed against her mother-in-law. The choice is certainly between two evils; it is without doubt the part of prudence to choose the least.

France has acted ridiculous farce in sending troops to Arizona: they are recalled.

From the Journal of War, we have but little intelligence, as it is all of a military nature. The military, under the command of Gen. White, have been ordered to leave the Missouri River, and to return to the 12th June, from which we make the following extracts.

Two other companies under the command of General Brady, arrived at Orleans on the 23d inst., destined for General Ashmun's Headquarters. We are happy to hear that the power to make, that the two young men who were taken prisoners, have been rescued through the intervention of a party of twenty-five men, and by paying a ransom of $2000 worth of goods.

From New York Mercantile Advertiser.
DINNER TO WASHINGTON IRVING.
We at length have the pleasure of laying before our readers a condensed report of the proceedings at a dinner given to Washington Irving, on the 30th ult., at the New York. The proceedings at full length, occupy six columns of our paper, and we have no room to do more than refer to the report, which we have printed in full.

The large room of the Hotel, (capable of accommodating more than three hundred persons to dinner) was literally a tribune of eloquence, and the speaker, in his address, alluded to the history of the country, and the progress of the Republic, and the progress of the Republic, and the progress of the Republic.

The mention of this subject calls up a crowd of associations and recollections, which even adequately to refer to, would carry us far beyond the limits of the present occasion; but on which my feelings compel me for a few moments to allude.

When the gentleman alluded to, commenced his brilliant career (and which we trust is far from its termination), by a display of the wit and humor, the keen satire and epigrammatical portraits which distinguish his earliest productions (in which it is understood he has been most successful), we had scarcely any idea of the character of his mind and genius.

The legend of the first colonization of this city and the adjacent shores, first at this moment he revived in the minds of our people, the most interesting and valuable of his works, his "History of the City of New York," written in the finest style of burlesque and satirical wit and ludicrous description, and of playful and pointed satire and ridicule.

The materials of both these satirical productions, were of native growth. They partook of an transient and local character, and were not intended to be permanent, but they were original and indelible ere they were written.

Through all the writings of our distinguished countryman, even in his earlier and sprightlier productions, we meet with occasional sentiments of high and grave import, the genuine growth of ardent feelings which glow in the heart.

Our Havrian Guest, three weeks to his native land, returned on the 14th inst., and he has the honor to have been the guest of the Mayor and the Board of Aldermen, and to have been the guest of the Mayor and the Board of Aldermen.

It is a gratifying circumstance, that the two young men who were taken prisoners, have been rescued through the intervention of a party of twenty-five men, and by paying a ransom of $2000 worth of goods.

They obtained this allowance in exchange for their country. Question, I was surprised to find myself from such a charge, nor could I have believed to this time, if I did not know the character of the man who was taken prisoner, that he would have been rescued through the intervention of a party of twenty-five men, and by paying a ransom of $2000 worth of goods.

As to my native city, from the time I approached the coast, I had indications of its growing greatness. I had seen all the grandeur of the city, and I had seen all the grandeur of the city, and I had seen all the grandeur of the city.

"This was my own native land." Mr. Irving was here interrupted by immense applause. When the cheering had subsided he resumed as follows: "This has been asked 'an I be content to live in this country?'

"I have no objection to live in this country, and I have no objection to live in this country, and I have no objection to live in this country, and I have no objection to live in this country.

"I have no objection to live in this country, and I have no objection to live in this country, and I have no objection to live in this country, and I have no objection to live in this country.
