The plan of operations will be by a combined movement of the thoops under General Scott and these under General Alkinson, from Chicago and the Mississippi, to attack the Indians on both sides, and scoor the country, till they are entirely sub-used. We are informed that General Scott has orders to reduce them to unconditional aubmission, and not to suspend his operations, while any of the hostile Indians remain east of the Mississippi. They will be required to excess that river, and to repair to such addistricts as may assessigned to them. There is reason however to hope, that the force now un ler General Atkinson, if the last call of the Governor of Illinois has been fully obeyed, will have check-ed, it not subdued, the Indiana, before the arrival of Lord Manafield—Mat nominia umbra. general Scott. Stilt, as the operations are remote, and the result of our Indian empraign always doubtful, and more particularly as the nature of the wazafare is of most distrassing character, it is certainly prudent to guard against any consequences, and to take such measures, as will effectually reduce the hostile Indiana, and overawe the diseffected. BOSTON, June 18. Melancholy disaster.—We have to record one of the most heart rending events which has taken place in our most heart-rending events which has taken place in our adjoinity for many years. A party of our enterprising young citizens had been down the Bay fishing yesterday in the boat Bunker Hill; and when returning she was overset in a guall, about six o'clock, in the lower har bor. We cannot but hope; that in the state of things in the north west, every dispassionate measures, of whatever party, will see the nocessity of an immediate elements to be presented to the Indians beyond the sphere of our atthements. The scenes that are now acting form a lesson worthy to be presented by all who are the real friends of the indians.—Gibbe.
