The Hon. J. W. Tyler, senator from Virginia, has lately been dined, for and in consideration of his services in behalf of nullification, in the senate of the United States. On heing toasted, he dilivered an eloquent speech—if possible it be, that Mr. Tyler should be cloquent—defending his champ enship of the political heresy. If the country he not shaken from its state of prace, it will not be owing to the want of exertion on the part of the friends of Mr. Calhoun.

This action was brought by the plaintiffs, importing mer-chants in this city, to recover from the New York Ameri-can insurance company the sum of eight thousand dollars, in an open policy or insurance, effected on the cargo of the American brig "Plato," on a voyage from Marseilles to this spect. The entire amount insured was fifteen thousand dolors. ars; and the claim now made was for a partial loss, allegis a sign and the claim now made was for a partial loss, allegation to have been sustained under the following circumstantia: The cargo, which consisted of seventeen hundred and fifty quarter casks of imitation Port and Madeira wine, whirty casks of midder, and a few cases of wine, were taken on beard the "Plaio," at Marseilles, in the fall of the wear 1931. On the first of October in the same year, the

Near the Banks, she encountered a heavy gal; of wind, which continued for several days with unabated violence. The brig leaked bully is not the outlimest issue of hor arturgics and it was found occasion occupied by a female doubter by a female doubter by a female doubter by the subject of the hold; to stave the wine casks, and throw the wine into the soa, by means of the pumps, and then heave the empty cash occupied. In this manner, three hundred casks were destroyed. For the loss so far, the plaintiffs have been duly compensated by a few of the pumps, and then heave the empty cash occupied to the pumps, and then heave the empty cash occupied to the pumps, and then heave the empty cash occupied to the pumps, and then heave the empty area for the subject of distance. Part was stowed in a warehouse, and part under a shed, where it remained for the space of six weeks or two months. The bung cloths of the casks were rotten, and the part reand the bung-hole decayed so that the winc leaked out, and a portion of some of the casks was lost. It was feared that the wine would become sour if the casks deficient were not supplied. They were therefore filled up, had new tins put in, were re-ecoopered, and in the month of March, 1832, the "Plato" put out again to sea, tight, staunch, and strong. She atrived off this port near the light house, and, in a heavy sea, whilst running down for a news schooner which she mistaok for a pilot boat, she struck—thunwed very heavily, sprang a leak, and went news schooner which she mistook for a pilot boat, she struck—thumped very heavily, sprang a leak, and went over. She was afterwards got up to the city and run into the med, by means of which the leak was in some measure stopped. The American insurance company was informed of these circumstances, and refused to meet the claim made upon them. The plaintiffs now sought to recover the sum of eight thousand dollars, the amount of loss stated to be sustained by the depreciation in the value of the wine, owing to the leaking of the vessel, the consequent mixture of salt water with the same, and the damage which it had likewise undergone in its exposure to the West india san. In this claim was included the loss sustained by the madder. Several witnesses were examined for the plaintiff to shew beveral witnesses were examined for the plaintiff to show that the wine was brackish and vapid in flavor. The counsel for the defence applied for a non-suit, on the ground that sufficient evidence had not been brought to show affirmatively that the loss sought to be recovered had eccurred by those perils of the sea against which the parties were insured; that on the contrary, the inference was irrestable from the testimony, that it had arisen from other causes; that it had accrued from the intrinsic quality or vice. rauses; that it had accrued from the intrinsic quality or vice of the article itself, and not directly from perils insured against; that the underwriters could never be made liable for the loss of the articles if it were proved int the quality itself was the substantial cause of the loss; and that the writeles is the present case had been damaged by their inherent inability to withstand the climate; (Philips, 246, 1st Johnson, 129.) that to entitle the plaintiffs to recover for a partial loss; it was likewise necessary to shew the nature and extent of that loss by certain evidence, in order to cnable a jury to estimate the same; that no testimony had been brought to prove what portion had been damaged by saltwater, what portion had become sour, or what portion had been destroyed by leakage; and that the whole matter was therefore left in uncertainty. The loss by the madder was acknowledged.
