One of the assessors from the latter parish, appeared before the Committee and testified to the number of voters included in the census, and explained the reasons why it was not produced, As to the other parishes mentioned, the Committee having no other data to which they could refer, have felt themselves obliged to adopt the census taken in the year 1829. That this may be productive of some injury to the citizens of those parishes is probable, but the Committee conceive they have no power to act otherwise than they have done, leaving the officers of the law the right of bringing to justice, under the provisions of the 6th section of the act or the leading passed of the lead the act or the beginning passed at the last session, entitled, "an act to provide for taking a t class coppered brig Omar, Capt. It is in fact so stated, for the preamble says "in order to secure to the citizens thereof, the enjoyment of the rights of life, liberty and property," the constitution or form of government which follows, is ordained and established. By that instrument, various rights and privages are secured to the people that the reased within the aforesaid limits, or that at the time after might inhabi-within the same. On the 14th day of April, in the year 1812, Congress passed a law by which it is provided "in case the Legislature of the State shall consent thereto, that all that tract of country comprehended within the following bounds, to wit: beginning at the junction of the Iberville with the river Mississippi; thence along the middle of the Iberville, the river Amite and the lakes Maurepas and Pontchartrain to the easters inouth of Pearl river; thence up the custern branch of Pearl river to the thirty first degree of north latitude; thence along the said degree of latitude to the Mississippi river thence along the said degree of latitude to the Mississippi river thence along the said degree of latitude to the Mississippi river thence along the said degree of latitude to the Mississippi river thence along the said degree ritory in the Senate and House of Representations. several parishes of a representative in this of latitude to the Mississippi river thence down said river to the place of beginning, shall become and form a part of the state of Louisicome and the state of Louisic laws thereof, in the same manner, and for all intents and purposes as if it had been included within the original boundaries of the said State." The second section of the same act provides that "it shall be incumbent on the egislature of the State of Louisiana imcase they consent to the incorporation of the territory afaresaid, within their limits, at their first session to make provisions by law for the representation of the said territory in the legislature of the State, upon the principles of the constitution, and for securing to the people of the said territory, equal rights, privileges, ben cfits and advantages, with those enjoyed by the people of the other parts of the State; which law shall be liable to revision, modification and amendment by Congress and also in the manner provided for the amendment of the State constitution, but shall not be liable to change or amendment by the Legislature of the State." In compliance with the provisions of this act of Congress, the Legislature on the 4th day of August, 1812, approved and consented to the enlargement of the limits of the State by the annexation of the aforesaid territory, and the 25th of the same month, the legislature did by law add three members to the Senate and six to the House of Representatives .-Here we see, what were the opinions of those who entered into this compact with the United States, many of them had been members of the convention that had formed the constitution but a few months before, and it is presumed understood its meaning.
