LOUISIANA LEGISLATURE.

TWELFTH LEGISLATURE 1st SESSION Monnar -- February 16th, 1835. SENATE.

Mr. Hoa presented a petition from the Ponchatrain Railroad Company, stating that they have been at considerable expense in constructing and preserving the railroad, yet have accumulated no profits-and praying that as the road is of advantage to the community, they may have the privilege to augment their capital, increase the amount of tells exacted, extend their route of operations, and have their charter for these paragons continued for 35 years. He presented also a bill in accordance with the memorial. Both were referred to a special committee.

The resolution presented on Friday last by Mr. Moore for a joint committee to inquire into the expediency of repeal ing all the laws which liceuse gambling houses or authorise gambling; and matructing the committee to report a bil making gambling a criminal offence of the highest pena character, names able by imprisonment in the ponitentiary

On its second reading, Mr. Hos wished to have omitted the epecification of any punishment, that the committee nught not be shackled, but left to impose such a penalty as might be deemed most advisable.

Mr. Moore said that as the committee was one of inquiry only they were not necessarily bound to report any particu-

Mr. Tenney thought the diction could be amended, for th ere is an inconsistency in the expression. One clause rtates that gambling shall be considered a criminal offence of the highest penul character—which by the laws of the state would be punishable with death; while the next clause defines the highest penalty of this criminal offence to be imprisonment. He would therefore move to strike out the ords "of the highest penal character."

Mr. Moore would not accede to this amendment for he conenters gambling is a crime of the highest penal character, equal in effect to robbery or naurder, as it too frequently leader o those crimes. The relations of society find it is so. The laws should define it to be so. It is an outrage on society, to tolerate the practice; it is criminal to permit those fiends of hell-like the devi.-to roam abroad at large seeking whom many a wid .w and orphan have to imprecate the laws and legislature which countenance those imps of ir inuity : and deprive them of their dearest tie on earth. These gamblers are devits incarnate. Their crimes are of the highest penal character. They should be gibbetted and hung; or chained with iron vokes; or branded like Cain, so that all who see them could avoid them. They are pests of the earth equal to postilence or famine. It is impossible to describe their more roces style of doceit and imposition. Day after day, and at mucht they lare the innocent and unwary; and entrap them in their acts. Lately two men from the country parts of the state had put up at Richardson's hotel; and had brought with them the amount they received for their mother's grop on the Pearl River. They were decoyed by these fellows, who are interspersed every where in the shape of boarders, waiters and servants; they went to the gaming table not thinking to play for 'more than a trifle: but they were soon undeceived, and had not one cent left of the whole rum. These instances are too common with the old as well all the rest!

be represented by the world for establishing gambling by law loid it, justice! In God's name, let us at once and forever remove from our name this odious stigms. Let us no longer tolerate imposition upon imposition, disgrace upon disgrace and distress upon distress. Are there not other sources o revenue with which the treasury of the state may be filled, without resorting to the detestable mode of countenancing diabolica crimes? They are said to contribute to charita of misery and charity than they ever relieved? Persons President will recommend hostile who might aire have been ernaments of society; happy in themse ver, and useful to all around them. Shall villains the execution of this treaty, the message of the Presiof the deepest dye like these be tolerated by the State of dent is awaited for, with a view of carrying the votos Louisiana, for the paltry tax which she can levy on the li-ments; yet there are about 40 of them in the city-spreading throughout like branches of a bank or railroad. This wa not in the contemplation of the laws. They have therefore been either violated or evaded; therefore even on that account they should be repealed. In God's name let us therefore put a step to the practice.

Mr. Brownson suggested that if the resolution was after. ed to stating the offence to be of a high (instead of the highest) penal character; and that the committee were privileged to report a bill inflicting any other punishment thought more eligible, it would answer the purposes of the senators from New Orleans and Concordia.

Mr. Moore having agreed to this amendment, the resolution was passed, sent to the other house, and soon after was finally adopted. Messre, Moore and Thomas were appointed members of the committee on the part of the Senate, and Messrs. Sparks, Montegut, and Winn, on the part of the

We have been made acquainted with the debates which the rejection of this treaty produced in America, and wo know full well that those interested in this matter of twenty-five millions have sought to excite the Federal Government against France. We should therefore not at all be surprised, should the message contain something similar in character to what has been stated.

Nevertheless, nothing is now said about the war which was spoken of at first. The letters from Liverpool remark most judiciously, that the President desires hostile measures, but not belligerent ones; and from hence it may be understood, that if the Congress differ, it will be with fiscal hostilities alone, with which that body will operate. In doing this, the question of the tariff, which has shaken the Union to its very centre, will again be discussed. But the Legislatures, will they raise a storm, and provoke another sciem? To believe this, would be doing them injustice. The Tariff was reduced for the relief of the American people, and not for the convenience of the mations engaged in commerce with that country. What the exporters of produce sell in France, they can dispose of no where cise. What the States purchase in France, they can purchase in no other country, as long as France receives their own products .-with wines from Portugal, Madeira and the Azores, but then, to whom would they sell their cottons? The American Congress will be both to destroy a po tion of the national industry, and undo all that has been done in regard to the tariff.
