A DARK DAY IN QUEBEC. (From the Quebec Gazette, 17th November )

We experienced today one of the dark days which occ every two or three years, about the fall of the year. It was perhaps more remarkably dark than any for a number this title at Terragona: he was proud of it in 1814, he made the thermometer at about 50 of Fahrenheit. There was use of it in 1830 to seat himself on the first throne in the very little haze in the southern hemisphere; but particuworld. In 1793 he destroyed the iron cage of Mount St.

Michelt in 1833 he has the cells of this abbey rebuilt and west to east, which, as they grow less dones, gave the soldier who was drowning in 1834 his roomstitute for at 1900 cells.
