The resolution was carried by the vote of Mr Caldwell.

Laxs root Europe.—By the arrival yesterday of the ship Stalem, espails Destebéche, from Harre, whence the sailed on the 8d sit, we have received a complete fill of Harre speer to the 8d-desing 5 days later from France and 7 from Spein, than previously received via New York.

The congress of severeigns at Toplitz was not likely to produce much associate to the cause of liberty in Europe, as the emperor of Austria is intervarm in his adhesion. But it is believed, that Louis Philip is courting the favor of the holy alliance; and has his agents as well as consensation at Toplitz.

Madrid was tunequil at hat advices; and Meadimbel the referent assistance as a consensation of the reference at the consensation of the c belligerents, and might conquer both. The juntus are now too powerful to be slighted; and nothing but a convocation of the Cortes and an amendment of the constitution of the Cortes and an amendment of the constitution of 1812 can save the emitting government from impending rain.

(the prime minister) seems builted to graify the winter of the literal party in the convention of the Coupe. This is now considered indispensable, in consequence of the extensive formation of juntes in all the previn-

A central government of the juntus of Barcelona, Catalonia, Angea, Valencia, Murcla and Girodne has been betablished in the sity of Barcelona, for the shore previnces; and another is established at Andukar for Andulush, as a rallying point for the several juntus of that province, where general Las Navas has a large armed force with which he threatens Madrid. It was stated in letters from Madrid of the 23d September, that $900 coldiers of the queen's army had deserted to him; and that he was marching towards the capital with a force of 15,000 troops raised by the juntus.

The juntu of Saragessa had disminsed Montes for holding secret correspondence with the Carlists, with the design of opening St Sebastian to the pretender, whose troops on the line of the Pyrences have been gent. It is removed that the queen had become a backsider in the family way; and is much attached to a young efficer, whom shedikes to have near her person.

The Spanish ambassador at the court of Lisbon had demanded the intervention of the Portuguse government; but the cabinet decided against it by a vote of 4 to a mexisting circumstances weald not justify the sending of any troops out of Portugul—it being stated that incendiary movements prevailed in Estremadura.

The Portuguese seem apprehensive of the adoption in Spain, of the constitution of IS12; lest it should produse revolutionary movements in their own kingdom.

A letter dated Bayonae, Sept. 36, from Bidassoa, states that attempt had been made by the Carlists to force a passage across the river on the side of 85 Jacques and Hendaye, by night; but darkness had rendered vain the attempt and innoxious the firing. None were wounded on the French side; nor in it thought were wounded on the French side; nor is it thought likely that Don Carlos can fulfil his board passing the Bidascoa to Berintz. Garrisons have already been

The emperor of Russia had ordered the disbanding of one of his armies on the 1st September. The consess of sovereigns was to have met on the 3d ult. to a reduction of the public debt, by changing the 5 per cents into 4. The Austrian emperor is also determined to reduce his standing army.

Many of the Spanish juntas have denounced Toreno and his colleagues; and have demanded their impeachment. Toreno has however timely and narrowly escaped. These juntas are now recognized as provincial governments by the Spanish ministriwand they may prove a much better defence against Don Carlos than any foreign auxiliaries. any foreign anxiliaries.

The princess Lieven of Russia is on a visit to Talleyrand; they are the two greatest diplomatists of the day. Talleyrand has always succeeded by the inverse and influence of famale politicians; and he is determined to hold on to them till age shall become dotage-

The fast driving of the drays and other vehicles thro the street has become an intolerable numanes; despite the ordinances of the city council; and in consequence of the negligence of the police commissaries.

The most effectual laws that we have known to pre vest this suisance were those that ordered that all drivers should walk by the side of their horses or drays, or otherwise be fixed. When drivers are permitted to ride in their carts, it is of course for their pleasure to drive qbickly; but when they are compelled to walk, the temptation to rapid charioteering is entirely con-quered. Will the members of the city council act on this suggestion?

The eligent of the training to the training of the contribution and gratitude of the people of the U.S. but it is their intention to make it rather a pattern of admiration and gratitude of the training the states of the training to urge upon the eligibles. It would be unbecoming to urge upon the eligibles of Louisians the propriety of promoting the eligibles of the society. There can be no American to be received to the purpose of erecting a monument to othe, to whose virtues (and even to his memory) our country owes so much.

And sowmall is the amount expected from each present hat it will be in the power of every one to contribute. The Society has limited the subscription to can dollar for each individual. By this arrangement, however, persons are eachled to subscribe for each of their smiles as well as for themselves.

The association is composed of the Senators and Representatives of the people in the Hease, and those who were in Congress at its origin; the President of the U.S.; and the Secretaries of the Departments of Government.

The managers are some of the most distinguished officers in the army and navy, and the most respectable citizens of the District of Columbia. Chief Justice Marshall was its first President; at his death the venerable of themselves, the vice-president of the society, in supposing that the most arcent wish of my heart is to see some lasting testimonial of the greatest men our country has produced.

'You are right,' says the lamented Marshall in his letter to Judge Cranch, the vice-president of the society, in supposing that the most arcent wish of my heart is to see some lasting testimonial of the greatest men our country will be proud.'

Congress should also be invoked, in the most carnest and respectful language, not to suffer the Post Office establishment to be used to our injury and d. struction. The remainder of the message is chiefly occupied with local affairs,—including the Indian relations which occupy a large space. The Governor gives a pragraph of encouragement and recommendation to the proposed great Rail Road, from the Ohio at Cincinnati to Charleston (South Carolina.)

A plan of a selected public house, to be called the Peansylvenia Hesse, has been drawn, and is now exhibiting in Philadelphia.

The dimensions of the building are as follows, viz—Front on Walnut street, 180 feet; on 6th at 423 feet; height 5 stories. The basement story is to be occupied by slope and stores—there being 5 fronting on Walnut street and 24 on 6th street, besides a large stage office and an ovater cellar.

Rang was once sent to market by his master who had invited some company to dinner, with orders to buy the best things is it. He returned home with a bask et of totgues, and being reproved for his bed tasts, in selecting such a dinner for a company, insisted upon it that he had literally obeyed his instructions, for that tongues were the best things in the world. By them it was that truth was promulguted and falsehood demonsted. He might even have gone so far as to have said that some of his wisest lessons in his book of fables, had it been then written, we're pronounced by the tongues of goats, sheep and other animals. His master is a rage told him to go back and purchase the worst things he could find, in the market, and to his astonishment, on Asop's return, he found that his basket was again loaded with tongues, which he inhisted were the worst things in the world, especially when employed in hypocries, flattery, and deceit.

What Asop said was true enough, and there are many other things in the world that are the beer, and at the same time the worst imaginable things. Commercial credit is among the number. When used in moderation it is agreat moral power capable of augmanting the wealth of individuals and of nations, by transferring existing capital to the hands by which it can be productively employed, instead of letting it lie idle in the slape of merchanduse in soure houses, or of grain in granaries, or of coin in iron cheeks or the vasits of banks. But when employed to excess, or in other world, when it is abused, it becomes an engine of vast mischief, involving not only individuals, but whole communities in distress. There is no greater calemity that can be fall a young men can writhstand them, and as all that glitters appears to be gold to the inexperienced mind, the idea of pay day never comes into their view, when they sign their rannes to promisory notes, their april to meet which depends entirely upon contingencies which they cannot control.—Philadelphia Gazette.

The Foxes were surrounded, and a desperate fight was fought, which remitted in the killing of visit rumbers on both sides, but in great have smong the Foxes. The survivory, retreating farther up, and along the shores of Lake Winnebago, were overtaken, and made another stand on the ground on which now stands "Le grand Bone doe Morte." Here the parties fought to desperation, but the Foxes were literally cut to pieces. The tradition says all were slain but about twenty; and these flying before then blood-thirsy pursuers, were overtaken at La Prarie du Chien, and made prisonors.

No people regard with more holy feelings the rights of spulture than the Indians. It became the first duty of the survivors, under the influence of this feeling after the contests, to collect the bodies of the slain that lay accatered over these two battle fields; and as is the Indian custom of those regions to this day, they were pilled one above another, with layers of a rith between, and covered up. The French named these mounds, "Le petit" and "Le grand Buite des Morta". The first because it is the smaller of the two, and doubtless because there were fewer also on that spot.

This tradition if true, makes out a hard case for the Foxes. But who can put his finger on a place in the Indian history, or who can toll a conflict of the Indian and the white man, as when aggressor? I assert, that from the landing of our fathers at Plymouth and Jamestown, down to the Black Hawk war, as far as we have authouter materials, this is capable of demonstration.—Kwickerbooker.
