REMARKS

The pleasant, and favorable weather for the examination of business which we have for some time past, continued yesterday, and the result was, that a good deal of cotton changed hands, principally by planters selling to speculators. The latter, however, were not disposed to operate to any extent, except at a decline in prices of ½. The stock is represented to be in good order, and the receipts are coming forward freely, but the unfavorable accounts of smoke by each week's steamers, are beginning to have an influence on the minds of buyers, and they are not disposed to operate to any extent, except at a decline in prices, and no purchasers.

This may be attributed to the great quantity of cotton now on the way to this city, and the scarcity of money in the country.

Corrected.—There has been a good demand during the day, for the extreme grades of cotton, and the sales reported will reach 1,000 bales, at full prices. Some of the sales were made from Liverpool were favorable, but the accounts from Liverpool were unfavorable, they had no confidence to advance, in view of the large receipts, and the unfavorable accounts of smoke by each steamer, and therefore
