The morals of foreign seamen, more especially of British, are generally corrupt. They are usually intemperate, and it may be safely assumed that a sober sailor, of foreign origin, is a rare phenomenon. This fact must exercise a very deleterious influence over American sailors; and respectable and honest parents, knowing this general dissoluteness, are unwilling to expose their chil-dien to such contamination. Indeed they generally consider a son test, when he goes to sea. The Ame-rican sailors, in both our military and mercantile marince, are not sufficiently numerous to give a tone to nautical morals. A great many people in England, seem to unagine, or at reast they act as if they imagined, that the more sound of reform would be sofficient, without any proceedings to produce a change in the stay of the country. They most ske the reform Bill, for Reform uself; and a great mistake it is, the Bill turnishes the means of maxing a reform—or a change for the better—and, in this case, the change must be very great to be of any use at all. The ministers the missives appear to be amongst those persons; for nothing indicates that they look upon it as necessary that some considerable change should take place in the minister of managing the affairs of that country.

change should take place in the manner of managing the affairs of that country.

If the taxes and takes be still to remain such as they now are, the Bill would lead to disappointment and discontent, such as must plunge the country in utter contusion. The people do not want a change in the form of the government; they want only to make that same government a great deal cheaper than it is; and, by so doing, they take the sure course of preserving, us for its interly impossible that the millions can love it, while so very costly as it now is. The changes therefore must necessarily be as follows:—To put as and to all pensions, since ures, grants, allowances, and to all pensions, since ures, grants, allowances. one see, the Bull would level to deprominent and conditions of the control of the ILLibe sold at flewlett's Exchange, corner of Chartres and St. Louis streets, on Monday the 12th inst at 12 o'tlick.

1000 Lests of Ground

Situate in the village of felixburgh. This sale offers considerable advantages to speculators, moire especially to that part of the population of New Orleans who are in the habit of going to the Northern cities to spend the summer, as Felixburgh is aurpassed by no spot along the whole coast in point of leadth, beauty and she substrity of the air. It is situated on the lake short near the Pass Christian. The land is elevated and covered with fine oak, ash and magnolia trees, it abounds with fine springs exercal of which are ininesit; sich and systers are in abundance, together with the five sea breezes and bathing cannot fail to render it favorable to purch aers. It is expected that ers long a rail road will pass through Felixburg to Natches, the proprietor has therefore reserved a space of 450 feet. It we put cant of the sale of this property will be related in the hands of the notary for the building of a wharf, subject to the order of a cammittee to be appointed by the purchasers for that purpose. The lerns of faile are 6, 12 lit, 34 quonths credit for notes endorsed to the a titulestion of the vendor, with special scortgage until fluid payment. Those cashing the first two notes will be allowed a discount at the raise of 10 per own per annura, and have the pricilege of giving the other two notes without endorsers. The notes will remain in the hands of the notary until a mortage which yell each of the large with hard.
