FROM ENGLAND. By the ship Lyone, which arrived yesterday, we are in possession of news from Liverpool to the 15th of October.

224 DECEMBER. This is a memorable day in the annals of Louisiana. This day twenty years ago, the people assembled to choose an invading for within two leagues of the capital, and the same day witnessed the march of a courageous band of citizen soldiers, collected as well from Louisiana as from Tennessee and Mississippi.

LIVERPOOL, Oct. 31. We have the pleasure of waiting upon you this morning, and in the preceding twelve months by the latest New York advices, it appears that the Southern ports are again closed to the cotton trade.

By the decision and promptitude exhibited on this day by General Jackson, that saved the city of New Orleans from dishonor and pillage. The valor of the British army, which greatly outnumbered our obstinate bravery with which the attack was sustained, forced the enemy's general to reflection, reflection taught them caution, and caution induced delay.

High Price of Provisions. Why is it that the New York Gazette, a very popular paper, that in a country where the field of production is more ample than in any other in the world, and where the number and skill of the producers are equal to the demands of the population, that the price of all the necessaries of life are higher than in any other country?

It is both curious and alarming, as is stated by our contemporary, that all kinds of animal food are now so scarce in this country, that all kinds of animal food are now so scarce in this country, that all kinds of animal food are now so scarce in this country.
