DESIDERATA IN SUGAR MAKING FROM THE CANE.

To the Cane-cuts and other cane-nurseries or agents of all cane-growers, and to the sugar is producers and to all persons interested therein.

Gentlemen:—Permit me to invite your attention to the desiderata I have obtained in the various branches and departments of the manufacture of sugar and other products of the sugar cane; with a view to the universal dissemination thereof; and in particular, to their diffusion in North and South America, and in the West Indies, for the benefit of the following, viz.

1. To operate the sugar of any portion, of the whole, of the coloring, & of all other impurities, in the same, into production of sugar from the cane juice.

2. To prevent the injuries to sugar hitherto universally resulting from the system pursued in boiling, in all plantation boiling houses; in which department I have given particular attention to the duties of the boiler, not only intelligible to the scientific, but equally so to the negro; and hence result not only sugar of superior quality, but a much larger portion of absolutely crystallized sugar, and a larger quantity of sugar, equal in quality to sugar which has undergone refinement, than has hitherto been produced of the grain and impure mass of empyreumatic matter into which the juice of the cane is converted in all the world, except in China, convert the juice of their cane.

3. To prevent the loss hitherto universally resulting from the undetected mode of manipulation subsequent to the boiling of the sugars to sugar.

4. To prevent subsequent to the smallest loss by precipitation from sugar deposited in hogsheads.

5. To prevent deterioration and loss of sugar during a voyage at sea.

6. To convert into molasses and sugar a large portion of the unripe and fruitaceous parts of the juice, which, in the usual manner, and consequence which has gone into an incipient state of fermentation; likewise, even a large portion of the dry, solid, ligneous part of the cane itself, to convert the whole into nothing of any value, to pond the production of manure, or used as fuel in the West Indies, under the den omination of "bagasse."

7. To increase the quantity and greatly enhance the value of molasses produced by the existing exceedingly injudicious process of sugar boiling in plantation sugar houses; and even the molasses produced by the most approved process in sugar houses, is of very inferior quality, & I beg it to be understood that I speak from my own practical knowledge; having had very extensive experience as chief manager of several sugar refineries; to one of which I have refined over 3200 loaf sugars in a single day; and the molasses I have made have never failed to command a ready sale, and a much higher price than those of other refineries; though the latter were much richer of sugar than mine, thus saving to mine the two-fold advantage of price and quality

8. To convert molasses into the finest vinegar at a most trifling expense.

9. To convert molasses into spirits of the finest quality, and in unusual abundance.

I beg to assure such gentlemen who may wish to avail them selves of these benefits, that they may rest assured of their reality; and that I will at once remove both doubts and difficulties.

I remain, Gentlemen,

Your most obedient servant,

WM. GUTTERIDGE,

Late chief manager of the Congress Sugar Refinery, New York. aug 29
