Abuses.

Mankind has been by some sarcastic philosopher, divided into two great classes, to wit: the deceivers and the deceived, and really when we examine the structure of society, we find villany on the one hand so prompt to dupe, and insensate credulity on the other, so ready to be duped, that a colloring of justice is, despite its severity, afforded to the opinion of the satirist. That abuses of all kinds flourish; that premises occupy the place of perlocutive; and that we submit with imperturbable good humour to deception, are we apprehend, undeniable truths. When evils become absolutely insupportable, then, and, not till then, does the film of credulity fall from our sight—we open our eyes in astonishment, discover that we have been entirely too passive—clamour for redress—receive an assurance of future justice, and relapse again into voluntary blindness. Look for instance at the abuses that infest our city—at the imperfect execution of our municipal ordinances—at the yet wretched and inefficient organization of our police—at the nightly brawls that convert our Theatre into leagues and brothels, and decide whether we are not the most apathetic people in the world. Regulations for the amelioration of every defective municipal department prevail; there are standing laws on nearly all these subjects, but are they enforced? We know and feel to our cost that they are not. We know that latterly ladies dare not frequent public places of amusement, lest their delicacy be alarmed by sights and sounds calculated to shock the most unscrupulous—we know that Hack-drivers convert a crowded and respectable thorough-fare into a wide and filthy kennel, covered with tobacco juice, that they are in the daily habit of profaning the laws which prohibit their molesting passengers by occupying the side walks, or leaving their vehicles unguarded, that they deride the few complaints that are made of their insolence and infringements, resting in the certainty that the law will pass them by with impunity.

Such nevertheless is the tranquility with which we sustain these evils; that did not the press, from time to time, expose and denounce them, we would in all probability, go on from month to month, and year to year, in uncomplaining silence, depending for relief upon the tardy justice of our authorities. But the organ of public sentiment have manifested an energy and resolution which in a measure have aroused the people from their idle lethargy. Enmeus as is that first of virtues, patience, among the good citizens of New Orleans, they really begin to be fatigued with the present state of affairs. They are tired of being cursed with fair weeds and unsubstantial professions—they need something like reform—something exciting vigor and determination in our Councils. The can no longer be contented with that miserable, half-complying, half-denying system of administration which has hitherto reigned paramount. New Orleans as a large commercial metropolis, and as destined to hold the most exalted rank in size and population of American cities, is not unworthy the utmost efforts of care and attention to improve its condition to enhance its beauty, to give it safety and salubrity—cleanliness and comfort. Their exists no possible reason why N. Orleans should not exhibit the same admirable organization as Philadelphia—why her streets should not be as free from nuisances, and her police as efficient as in the latter city. Firmness and activity on the part of our corporation are all that is required—a resolution to pass wholesome and necessary laws—and an unflinching determination to preside over their execution, will soon remove the numerous sources of discontent which at present prevail.

Law—Art 5th of the ordinances respecting Carts and Drays, provides that any carman or other driver, who shall be guilty of running his horse or horses mule or mules, through the streets, or of driving at a faster rate than a walk when loaded, and at a slow trot when empty, or turn the corner of any street at a greater speed that a walk, shall be fined from ten dollars to twenty five dollars for the first offence and for the second he shall lose his horses, and besides, be subjective pay the above fines, and if he be a slave, shall receive from ten to twenty five lashes, unless his master or owner prefer to pay said fine.

Obedience—We yesterday witnessed in the lower part of the city, a splendid race between two Draymen they went at their full speed, crashing and thundering along, with a crowd of dogs and little negroes after them—the canine race yelping, and the enlivened one screaming with delight, while the sporting charioteers shouted to their steeds, and plied the whips with noble emulation. Where are the police officers appointed by the municipality for the express purpose of noting the infractions of its ordinances?

St Louis.

A slip from the St Louis Bulletin brings the intelligence that on the morning the paper was put to press, a fire was discovered in the gentlemen's saloon of the theatre. As half past three the only machines yet on the ground were those of the hose companies.

Treasury Notes.

By a communication of the Secretary of the Treasury, Dated November 1st, we learn, that in consequence to the 12th section of the act of October 12th, 1837, "to authorize the issuing of Treasury Notes," it is hereby published that the whole amount issued during the last month has been $53,723 93.

Treaty with the Winnebagoes.

The Winnebago Indians have concluded the treaty with Government, by which they abandon all right and title to the land east of the Mississippi, and are to migrate to that part of the neutral ground, west of river, of which they became possessed in in 1832.—One million, five hundred thousand dollars is the sum secured to them for the relinquishment of their claims. It will be paid in various ways—in goods, provisions, agricultural instruments, education, liquidation of debts and in permanent income, effected by investment in solid stocks.

The elections in New York will doubtless terminate in a similar manner to those of Pennsylvania. Whig denunciation and whig mendacity could not shake the key stone state, and we would be not a little amazed, if the good citizens of New York suffered themselves to be deluded by the gloomy ravings of the Express or impudent tales-tales of the Herald. As for the latter, his compositions have assumed an aspect of sentility and shamelessness which should place him beneath criticism and reply.—Silent contempt is the only portion worthy of a man who makes his intellect pander to his insignity. The feast of independance displayed by the Herald, is a shallow device that knavery frequently adopts to cloak malice.—There is an artifice more consummate than that of your candid writer, who under pretext of a bold and frank demeanour, assails every thing that comes in collision with his petty vanity. Conductors of newspapers such as these may amuse the rabble, and be admired by those who appreciate buffoonery, but they can never exercise any influence over the intelligent and the reflecting; and we do not imagine that the tone of the public mind in the Empire State, will be for one moment affected by all the diatribes that Bennet can put forth—even tho' they be endorsed with the signal approbation of the New York Daily Express et id omne genus.

Charleston and Hamburg Railroad.

The Railroad between Charleston and Hamburg is in the most prosperous train of operations. The receipts for the month of October were upwards of thirty five thousand dollars, a sum never exceeded but once since the establishment of the Company.—The city of Charleston has already greatly benefited by this railroad. Her commerce who had been a mere nothing for many years, has augmented in a steady ratio since the formation of this means of inter-communication between Georgia and South Carolina.
