ARRIVAL OF THE ACADIA.

NINE DAYS LATER FROM ENGLAND.

The steamship Acadia arrived at Boston on the 7th inst., after a very boisterous and stormy passage of 19 days.

The arrival of the Columbia steamer which left Boston on the 24 March, had considerably allayed the warlike apprehensions which had previously existed in England, and the tone of the leading papers had become far more pacific. The effect on the London market had been very beneficial and the funds [illegible] per cent, consols being quoted at [illegible]

Cotton and stocks continued to be offered at very depressed [illegible] the few transactions that had occurred [illegible] reduction of 1/2 per cent, on the prices current previous to the receipt of the warlike intelligence.

United States shares are quoted at £5.

[illegible] York Courier and Enquirer contains an abstract of the above intelligence from the Courier and Enquirer of March 18th, 1841.

[illegible] arrived at Liverpool on the 13th March, with the mails to the 1st of July.

The Sovereign's speech at the opening of Parliament, which there will be found in another column, is very short, and contains no allusion to the affairs of the United States.

It is to be regretted that the Acts of the Legislature of Texas [illegible] upon us, or upon those who are acquainted with all the facts. And it is very necessary to remove a false impression which has been created in the minds of many persons from the publication of the Texian Papers. The letters of Gen'l Hamilton, which will be found in the New-York papers are doubtless [illegible]
