FOR THE STATE, AND PUBLIC JUSTICE.

HENRY JOHNSON.

WEDNESDAY MORNING, JULY 2, 1841.

ONE OF THE most absurd specimens of extraneous apathy we have had for some time, is the American at the last hour—of a bank in the District of Columbia, upon Mr. Eaton's plan, would be unconstitutional.

We propose not to concur with the project of the Secretary of the Treasury, and would only do so in preference to having no bank at all. But as regards its constitutionality, even to the most rigid constitutionalists, there cannot seriously be any question.

The right of Congress over the Federal District is precisely that claimed by a local legislature over the state which it represents. The Legislature of Louisiana, may charge a duty of fifty millions, if it pleases.

It is plain that it creates a bank in the Federal District, and was familiar with its inhabitants, but had never known there any family of the name of Eaton.

The latter, tested that Mr. Abbott had been four or five dollars from him, and had then signed his instrument he left, stating that he had received letters which imperatively required his silence.

The testimony on both sides being closed, Mr.

Mr. Abbott, on behalf of the United States, opened the case for the prosecution. He commenced by acknowledging his failure to drop the charge of piracy, which he had previously made, and to give positive evidence to sustain it. He was however compelled to abandon his original theory, and to give up his claim in evidence.

The equipment of a vessel for the slave trade is prohibited by the law of the United States, and as early as 1794, changes were proposed thereto.

This act was subsequently modified in 1807, by another, increasing the penalty for each offence to $20,000. Notwithstanding these provisions, the law was frequently violated under various pretenses, till 1819 when it was enforced, the 3d section of which was added to the law of 1807, making it a crime for a vessel for the slave trade, the criminal should be punished by fine not exceeding $2000, and imprisonment not exceeding 7 years. It was under this decree that Mr. Abbott was tried.

Mr. Abbott, in his defense, contended that he had no power to enact such a law, and the powers of the states can be obtained by the General Govern-

We are of those who entertain no doubts of the constitutionality of a National Bank in the Federal, or in any other part of the Union.

In our opinion, if one is created, it will be a branch of the national treasury, entitled to the same rights as any other branch.
