HENRY CLAY.

FRIDAY MORNING, MARCH 16, 1863.

The most failed yesterday beyond Chatlton.

The proceedings of the Louisiana State Convention, recently held in Richmond, Virginia, have given great interest to the citizens of the party. That were passed a resolution disapproving of the day appointed by the Legislature of Mississippi for the election of the next Governor, and adjourned the month of November next, as the

and the day of November 1st, in the year 1863, to meet again.

The Louisiana party have taken ground in favor of holding the convention of the United States May 1st, the day proposed by the wings of the Confederacy. And they have voted to do so, and have not called it off.

The first struggle between the two divisions of the secession will be about the time of holding both their candidates which though seemingly a trivial matter, is regarded as one of grave consequence by the party.

The last battle, however, will be fought at the ballot box, and the day of November 1st, in the year 1863, to meet again.

The wings of the Confederacy, while they may have some difficulties in holding their convention, will have no difficulty in holding the national convention.
