FIRST BRIGADE LOUISIANA VOLUNTEERS.
BRIGADE GARRISON.
Special.
HEAD QUARTERS, New Orleans, June 29, 1865.

THE Colonel of the 2nd Regiment, in absence of the Brigadier, will assume command of the Brigade during the Division Orders No. 1, and cause to the officers and soldiers under his command, the same display of respect that they are called on to perform in the funeral honors to a deceased soldier, who, since the days of WASHINGTON, has filled the highest position in the gift of a free people.

The decline of ANDREW JACKSON, at the Hermitage, on the 8th inst., will be universally regretted, and to be expected, cover every country with deep sadness.

Besides the natural sympathy of character, connecting him a Soldier, a General and Statesman, among his patriotic fellow soldiers under his command, the present day by arms, in defence of the Government of the country, and by union in time of peace. Whether in the Senate the Chair of State, or in the Battle Field, he obtained the plaudits and thanks of all his fellow-citizens; the Nation will ever be elated from people or other nations, and rendered the halo of glory encircling our national annals, more brilliant by his name.

He has now descended to the tomb, and his patriotic mingles with the many departed American Statesmen and Soldiers, but long will his name live in the hearts of Louisianians; and long will his memory be cherished by our children and children throughout every Republic. To show the high esteem and love in which he was held, and to speak of his services, in behalf of a feeling of gratitude to Providence, that through him, so much did for the country, be raised to our country.

First, Thursday, the 13th instant, is set apart for the Funeral Ceremonies.

Second, Col. Francois F. Smith, of the Washington Regiment will direct a detachment from the Artillery Battalions under his command, to fire minute guns at the rise at intervals, each gun of five minutes, repeating the same number at like intervals, at noon and every fifteen minutes thereafter, the day, and will cause the National Banner to be displayed in mourning during the day in his front quarters and the flag staff of Lafayette Square.

Third, The Commanders of companies, 2d Regiment, will act in his flag staff in Tivoli Circle; and Col. Lawson, also in his flag staff in Annunciation Square.

Third, Col. Smith, commanding Washington Regiment, and Maj. Willard, commanding the regiment of Louisiana Volunteers, their respective regiments, at such an hour that by half-past 5 o'clock, P. M. they may be formed in square marching order, in front of the Second Barracks with the 2d military corps of the division; and in conjunction with the civic authorities and societies of the citizens of New Orleans and vicinity, will escort the illustrious departed Soldier and Statesman the last tribute of ceremony and respect.

Fourth, The usual badge of mourning on side arms to be worn six months.

Fifth, All the Field, Staff and Line Officers of every Regiment in the Brigade (excepting those two regiments on duty) are requested to assemble in full dress in the Place d'Armes, at half-past 4 o'clock, P. M. with the staff officers of division (not on duty) there to be subject to the immediate command of the general of division.

R. W. OAKEY, Colonel 4th Regiment, commanding Fire Brigade, L. M.

Newton Richards, acting Brigade Major and Inspector.
