GENERAL ORDERS, No. 1.

... ORLEANS, ... January 3, 1846.

... Quarters of the Line in ... the Parade ground ... Thursday ... the 8th ... the ordinary display ... Old Hero and Patriot who led the undisciplined children of the soil against the veteran soldiers of Great Britain, and achieved a victory, which in the almost total annihilation of the enemy and the magnitude of its results, challenges comparisons with the exploits of the greatest warriors, has ceased to be a living witness of the scene in which he was the prominent performer. Full of years and honors he has descended to the tomb. His splendid achievement on the plains of Chalmette remains inefaceably impressed on the memory of every American, but the Hero himself has passed away, leaving his fame in the hands of posterity. They will do him justice, and as an evidence of the willingness with which the citizens of New Orleans are prepared to render him any homage to the shade of a great Captain, whose valor and wise foresight and prudence defeated the armies of England and saved our city from the polluting presence and the ignominious shackles of a foreign foe, let us unite on this day as one man in commemorating the event with the enthusiastic outpourings of grateful joy of which its remembrance should properly inspire. Let us remember the name and renown of ANDREW JACKSON, and hallow his memory by the tribute of gratitude to which he is eternally entitled from the people of Louisiana.

☞ The Jeffersonian of yesterday has an article on the Gubernatorial election which is prodigal of unsubstantial boasts. In fact the entire article is a complete specimen of bragging on a most magnificent scale. The editor declares there will be a warm contest between the First, Third and Fourth Districts which shall give Johnson and Landry the largest majority. Plaquemine is set down at a round thousand for the Locofoco candidates. The Third District at fifteen hundred, and the Fourth at a thousand—total 3,5000. The unhappy Whigs are meekly allowed the Second by perhaps the usual majority—say a thousand, which deducted from 3,500, leaves exactly 2,500 as the majority which those fortunate gentlemen Johnson and Landry are to obtain—on paper.

As this is the loudest brag of the season, put forth with an astounding à plomb and maintained with inconceivable gravity we have thought it worthy a passing notice. The calculation is given as the estimate of one whose concert of his agency is founded on past experience of his correctness. We shall see whether he not more "correct" than "sagacity" in the calculations of this pseudo-prophet. Mean while, merely for the purpose of putting the two opinions on record, and resting them by the result, we still state what in our view will be the real state of the polls.

The First District we put down zero. Neither candidate will obtain more than a very small majority—The Second will give 1,200 Whig majority as a minimum 1,500 as a maximum The Third we concede to Locofocoism by from 600 to 800. The Fourth will be very nearly a tie. Our readers perceive that we do not the contest to be close, and that while we consider the chances in favor of Dr BURR and SPARROW we believe their majority will not be large. It is not our habit to indulge in absurd exaggerations for the sake of a little clap trap to encourage the timid The Whigs need nothing of the kind They are prepared to do their duty—only let them do it fully, and the accuracy of our predictions will be amply verified

At all events we shall see which will come nearest the mark—our sober calculation, or the extravagant estimate of the gentleman whose "concert and his sagacity" has been so frequently justified by the event

We beg to be understood that the above is our calculation—not that of our friends If we were to tell Locofocoism what the latter expect, it might affright its deluded cohorts from their propriety There is an old saying specially applicable to the present case, that there is no telling who will be Governor until after the election" We commend it as a pithy and significant adage to those inveterate blusterer's who prate about 2,000, 3,000 and 5,000 majority for JOHNSON—as Parliament mountains sometimes produce muscipular abortions, and the swelling prologue is not unfrequently followed by an insignificant conclusion. When the votes are counted, we shall see whether the Locofoco faculty of political calculation will have proved as astonishingly correct as ZERAH COLBURN'S solutions of Arithmetical problems.

SENATORIAL RESPONSIBILITY.—The Union indites a chapter, under this head, in which it argues on the responsibility of Senators, on the right of instruction, and the duty of obedience It contends earnestly against the course of a Senator in not conforming his action to the wishes of his State, and it thinks that it is not altogether improbable that this sort of representative treachery will be repeated in some quarter during the pendency of the present "long session." It is not known, certainly, at Washington, we understand, whether this LECTURE was intended particularly for Senators Allen of Ohio, Niles of Connecticut, and Haywood of North Carolina, or for Certain it is, however, that it is very proper for the perusal of those gentlemen, for it hits their case precisely. We hope they will mark, learn, and thoroughly digest the wholesome advice. What is sauce for the gander is certainly sauce for the goose.

Thus discourseth our brother of the Mobile Advertiser. We consider the entire doctrine of senatorial instruction an atrocious solecism in theory and an unmitigated humbug in practice False in theory, because its effect would be to deprive the Senate of its conservative and permanent character, by which it was intended to be a check upon the hasty and mutable legislation of the Lower House A humbug in practice, because in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred, the very party which professes the utmost reverence and respect for the doctrine of instruction, always contrive to evade obedience upon some paltry and shallow pretext.

If, however, instruction is to be considered a fundamental part of the Senatorial responsibility, we are clear with our Mobile contemporary, for applying it sternly and strictly to those locofoco Senators who grossly misrepresent the present politics of their States—such as Colquitt, Niles, Allen and Haywood. These gentlemen ought in justice to their constituents, and from the pride of consistency, either to vote with the whigs or resign.

ST. CHARLES THEATRE.—One of the most attractive bills of the season will be presented this evening, the performance of "The Poor Gentleman" in which Mr. and Mrs. Field will appear. For further particulars of what is to be played we refer them to the excellent bill in another column. During the evening will be exhibited for the first time a new Drop Curtain designed and painted by J. B. Stockwell. We understand that Governors Morton and suite will attend the Theatre this evening.

WM DEBUYS, State Treasurer
ROBT C. NICHOLAS, Secty of State
New Orleans 27th Dec 1845

Thursday morning, Jan'y. 8, 1846.

☞ The friends of General DEBUYS and Gen SPARROW are requested to assemble This Evening at 7 o'clock, at the FIRST WARD HOUSE, No 110 Chartres street, between Conti and St Louis—Several orators will address the meeting on the occasion

☞ To-day being the anniversary of the Glorious BATTLE OF NEW ORLEANS, no paper will be issued from our office on Friday

8th of January.

At the time we are writing the weather is calm, clear and brilliant, giving the promise of a glorious day for the celebration of the 8th of January 1815. The procession will form in front of the State House, and will proceed through the principal streets in the city, until it reaches the Cathedral. It will be, as usual, be flanked by a military escort

The commemoration of the 8th January 1815 always a grateful duty to the people of our city, should on the occasion, be solemnized by even more than the ordinary display Within the last year the Old Hero and Patriot who led the undisciplined children of the soil against the veteran soldiers of Great Britain, and achieved a victory, which in the almost total annihilation of the enemy and the magnitude of its results, challenges comparisons with the exploits of the greatest warriors, has ceased to be a living witness of the scene in which he was the prominent performer. FLORIDA REPRESENTATIVE.—The Washington correspondent of the New York Tribune says: "Contrary to expectation, I understand that the Committee on Elections have determined to report in favor of the sitting member from Florida. From the fact that the Chairman of the Committee is in favor of giving the seat to Mr. Brockenbrough, (locofoco,) I thought that Mr. Cabell, (whig) would be ousted. The Committee, I understand, have resolved, by a vote of five to four, to report in favor of Mr. Cabell These are three whigs and two locofocos. If they remain firm to their decision, Mr. Cabell will retain his seat, though a strong effort will be made to influence the Committee to reconsider, or failing in that, a still more desperate effort will be made to have the House vote against the Committee. Mr. Cabell deserves the seat He is a young man, worthy of the young State, which has so gallantly wheeled into the whig ranks The motto of Florida applies to those who would turn him out contrary to the laws of Florida, and she says to those Virginia gentlemen who are trying to deprive her of his services, "Let us alone"

Such a decision is to be expected, if the rights of a Sovereign State are of any value when they come in conflict with party Mr Cabell is beyond doubt legally entitled to the seat That Mr. B does not believe himself to be the choice of a majority of the voters, is proved by his having refused to accept Mr C's offer to relinquish the contest, go back to the people, and let them decide the question."

☞ The correspondence of the Baltimore Sun has the following, in relation to the Oregon question:

"Conferences are going on between Mr Packenham and Mr. Buchanan upon the subject of the measures now proposed to be taken by Congress for the protection of settlers in, and emigrants to Oregon, for the extension of our jurisdiction over them and the Indian tribes, and for the establishment of a territorial government over Oregon

Mr Packenham himself does not regard any of these measures as cause of war though he took exceptions to some of them He suggested that the provisions for building stockades and granting lands to settlers might be offensive to the British government, should they be deemed an assertion of exclusive sovereignty over the territory"

These views are confirmed almost by every letter written from Washington The confidence that peace will not be broken will of itself tend to settle the question by amicable arrangement Mr POLK will be fortified in his disposition to adjust the controversy by friendly negotiation, and the country will sustain and applaud the act.

AFFRAY IN WEST FELICIANA.—We learn from the Louisiana Chronicle, that a shocking affray occurred a few days since between Messrs Lemuel P. McCauley, and John Turnbull, both planters of the parish It seems that Turnbull in company with several of his slaves, went upon the plantation of Mr. McCauley to chastise a slave belonging to the latter for some offence committed the night before, and was in the act of having him flogged by one of his servants, when McCauley came up and interfered whereupon Turnbull levelled a double-barrelled shot gun and fired both barrels at the former, eighteen bucks not taking effect nearly all in the right arm, one in his breast and one of two in his shoulder McCauley then fired at Turnbull with a double barreled gun loaded with small shot, hitting him in the side of the head. Both are expected to recover.

A MAN WAYLAID.—Mr Wm Hardy, a citizen of East Feliciana, was, we are informed, waylaid on Tuesday last, in the road leading from this place to the Bayou Sara landing by a person unknown The stranger asked Mr H if his name was not Wheelhouse and upon his answering in the negative, struck him over the head with a stick Mr H., however, succeeded in wrestling the club and gave him a severe drubbing The twice-nameless unknown has not been heard of since.—St Francisville Chronicle

There are an elevation and dignity of tone, and a compatibleness and correctness of view in the subjoined article from the Baltimore American, which commends it to to the attention of calm observers

THE TWO CONTESTING PARTIES.—When the resolutions of South Carolina were under consideration in the Senate on Monday last, the following remarks were made by Mr MANGUM

"And in my humble judgment, if we have recourse to arms, this Oregon question will be a mere pretext, and not the cause of the war I know well that the world is ever agitated, heaving and struggling under the operation of two great adverse principles of government that shake the continent of Europe—the whole of Christendom—the great republican principles on one hand, by which is the power vested upon the basis of the people, and the people have the control; and, on the other hand, the principle of monastical rule, whether absolute or qualified I trust there is no man in America Whose heart does not warm kindly and rapidly in favor of republican government than does mine Yet, which I see that on the other side of the water the whole press are treating us with a contemptuous silence, I believe—well, I restrain, having more of jealousy in it than is due to dullness—and when our press meets that again—I think all this ought to be silenced for the present I think, in these halls of ours, we should be extremely guarded and reserved on the subject of recrimination, when this delicate question is pending I do think that there are many things in the history of the country which have perhaps had much to do with the production of this excited state of feeling I am very much inclined to apprehend that at the bottom of it rest those great principles to which I have already alluded, in a state of heaving and almost destructive antagonism—destructive it would have been to the principles of free government had that not struck its roots to the very centre of this great continent When the ultimate trial of strength comes, you will still find that the people of this country are as one man Christendom itself will shake and tremble Thrones may fall and tumble, and dynasties be swept from the face of the earth, but that principle works in other lands as well as ours."

Attentive observers who have watched the progress of this Republic, as growing gigantesco, and the increasing influence which its spirit, policy and power are exercising over the affairs of Europe, cannot have failed to see that at some time or other a conflict between the new genius of freedom and the old genius of hereditary institutions must inevitably come It is the part of wisdom in us to keep all this collision as long as it can be done consistently with the national rights and honor. If, not only are we growing stronger and stronger continually, and becoming more and more qualified to stand as the champion of the new age now opening upon the world, but the friends of our cause, the cause of freedom, are also augmenting daily, strength and numbers and resources in the very heart of European monarchies

Nevertheless it is not to be denied that a decisive step has been taken in this country towards a development of this principle of antagonism to which allusion has been made The message of the President at the beginning of the present month, if it did not throw down the gauntlet of defiance to the regal power of Europe, did something very like it Certainly the intimation was very distinct that we are fixed in the political principles or faith; that we are ourselves alone, a peculiar people; that with our progress and policy on this Continent they are not to interfere; and there was something like a taunt at the baffled diplomacy of England and France in the affairs of the Texas annexation It was announced to the Powers of Europe that the forced peaceful possessions on the Continent of North America they must not expect a foot of their soil, for, that every portion of it, not yet occupied, was consecrated in advance by the spirit of our institutions

The American Republic is beginning now to constitute a new and a most marked element in the political affairs and relations of Christendom Here is a rising and a mighty power, emerging into the sight of the world and attracting the gaze of all men—whose history is so wonderful, whose advance is so startling, whose premonitions of future greatness, and imperial rule are so striking and unmistakable that the nations may well pause in wonder. And when it is known that this new country, so imposing, so inexplicable, is filled with the most daring and enterprising race of men that ever existed—that its institutions, imbued with a spirit fixedly hostile to every thing pertaining to monarchy, and that every step of its future gigantic growth will develope the hostility into shapes more and more formidable to the cause of legitimacy, it is not strange if the votaries of crowns are struck with dread and perplexity

Yet there are Powers in the old world that will look with friendly interest on our progress Strange as it may seem, Russia, further removed from similarity in respect to institutions and principles of government, and apparently the most antagonistic, Russia, the greatest of the Empires, will be the well wisher of the greatest of the Republics For her people, true to their Oriental instincts and characteristics, are as much and as fondly devoted to obedience as we are to freedom and independence; and they are not to be affected by our example The patriarchal feeling which attaches to the Emperor the name of Father, takes away from their obedience all idea of servility. They prefer to be governed rather than to govern, and they would not change their institutions for ours. This is the distinctive stamp of the Orientals, and makes the chief point of difference between them and the restless, bold, adventurous and intractable sons of the West.

But we need not pursue this subject However opposed the genius of our institutions may be to those of European growth, the nations of the old world are too much divided by jealousies among themselves ever to be united against us. For want of that union we may go on for a long time without hindrance or obstruction in the way of our destiny; yet it must also be added that interruptions to our peaceful progress may occur at almost any time

MYSTERIOUS DISAPPEARANCE.—We are informed, says Tuesday's Mobile Herald, that Mr. Averitt, the French Consul at this place, disappeared some two weeks ago, and has not been heard of since. It is supposed that some fatal accident has occasioned this prolonged absence.

WHO CAN BEAT IT.—The St. Francisville Chronicle of the 3d says: We have in our office a corn stalk, measuring fourteen feet and four inches in length—the largest we ever saw. It is from the plantation of Mr. James Hamilton, of this parish.

FIRE.—The [illegible] and outhouses of Mr. W. Buford, near Montgomery, Ala., were entirely consumed by fire on Christmas and last $8,000 to $9,000.

City Intelligence.

PARISH COURT.—The case of the New Orleans Draining Company vs. Lizardi & Co et al was resumed and concluded on Tuesday Mr Rosedius closed his argument at 3 o'clock, P M The whole case was then submitted to the Jury The Jury returned at 5 P M with the following verdict: "After hearing testimony, arguments of counsel, and the charge of the Court, the Jury find a verdict: "We, the Jury, find a verdict in favor of plaintiffs of $60,000, and are of opinion that the bonds were pledged.

TWO INQUESTS.—The Coroner was called yesterday to hold the following inquests

On the body of Adam Mitchel, in Tchoupitoulas street, pronounced himself with opium. Verdict accordingly.

On the body of John Coleman, in Conti street, who cut his throat with a razor Verdict, "Delirium Tremens."

EIGHTH OF JANUARY.—The festivities in commemoration of this memorable day commenced yesterday evening with a salute of 26 guns, at the Place d'Armes. We trust that this proud day, unclouded and refulgent in the annals of our country, will be kept up with that patriotism of feeling which characterizes the views of a freeborn people

RECORDER GENOIS' COURT.—James Daly, John Daly, Johanna Daly and Stephen Ryan, were arrested for being drunk and disturbing the peace They were required to give security for their good behavior in $300 each, failing to do which, they were sent to the Workhouse for 15 days Henry Lambkin, arrested as a suspicious person, found lying in an empty shed in Calaboose street, was sent to the Workhouse for 30 days John Holmes for disturbing the peace in the Orleans Ball Room, was fined $10

RECORDER BALDWIN'S COURT.—A lot of old men and abandoned women, some unintentionally, and others criminally guilty, were up before his Honor yesterday morning, and were discharged or summarily dealt with. Mary a Slave of Mr Kendig, was found in the fourth story of Mr Sonneberg's house in Camp street, at night, under suspicious circumstances and sent to jail

FRENCH THEATRE.—The favorite opera, and magnificent spectacle of the Jewess, will be performed to-night We predict a full and fashionable audience

THE NORTHERN MAIL failed yesterday from beyond Charleston

☞ The present term of the Court of Common Pleas, for Hamilton County, Ohio, has 50 cases of divorce upon the trial docket

LOOKING BLUE.—The ladies of Philadelphia, it is said, have adopted blue as the fashionable color, and may be seen promenading Chesnut street with blue bonnets and blue cloaks, blue dresses, blue stockings, and—blue noses

THE WHIGS OF EAST FELICIANA have nominated a full Legislative ticket For Senator, Dr James Perkins; for Representative, Messrs Abel C. Norwood, Philip Fesheam and Dr R H Lewis That is a strong ticket and deserve, if it does not command, success

JENNY LIND.—In one of his late letters from Germany, published in the New York Mirror, Mr N P. Willis takes the following notice of this new and brilliant star.

JENNY LIND came down from Frankfort to give us a concert yesterday She and Ronge, the Reformer, are the two wonders of Germany at the present moment, and of the latter you can read enough in the London papers The blonde Jenny seemed a little out of temper, and it was whispered about that she had been ordered to come, without her concurrence, and was doing penance rather than desposited the Landgrave and the gay public She is a slight, not fine-run girl, with that pale hair and skin which gives the Swedes such an under-done look, but her expression of countenance, notwithstanding, is like the surface of a quiet well, known to be a deep one With the most retiring modesty she carries the impression of a profound tenderness and capability It is understood that she is only using her profession to an amicable fortune for a poor lover, and with her marriage will end her prima-donna life. Thus little romance in the back-ground, makes her stand on the stage in very interesting relief. Her performance in acquiring her musical skill is said to have been a remarkable one. She arrived in Paris without money, expecting to give lessons She had studied in Sweden, to be able to support herself by the stage, as she worked her way to the summit of her art; but the true spirit of that exercise was that she should abstain from singing for a year, or her voice would be irrecoverably lost During the time she supported herself by teaching, and following her profession, rose at once to the highest point of excellence She is now rapidly making a large fortune Her peculiarity lies in the honesty to which she runs her notes, though she is an accomplished artist in all other particulars I had not to wait, fancy the razor's edge thinness of her apparent but the audience, a keenly appreciative one, expressed their admiration in rapture She has captivated the Court, and has become a favorite among them, and she will probably never go to America The Landgrave Ball's violin comes from the same country, however, and is as much at home in the same fine drawing-room into the impossible, you are partially reassured

Too much human worship is idolatry to be to her, I think, of both Jenny Lind and the Landgrave I dined with her The sweetness of the little story into which the pretty Swede has come unwillingly to sing, took her to the palace to lunch with him after the concert, and her departure from the Ball-room at the termion, was amid an awe-struck silence, as to her rank and consequence of the place really a wonder one would suppose, for her propose distinction with an obscure lover
