Correspondence of the Bee.

Washington, May 29, 1848. Enough time has elapsed since the adjournment of the Louisiana Convention, to elicit a fair expression of opinion, as to the progress and appreciation of the work which it has accomplished.

It is the universal feeling, that the Louisiana Convention has done more for the State than any other body of men, since the Revolution. It has not only secured the independence of the State, but it has also secured the independence of the people.
