Russia—European War.

We published yesterday some statistical information touching the military resources of Russia, from which it appears that the standing army of that colossal power—or what may be termed its ordinary peace establishment—is composed of nearly one million of soldiers. To those who are somewhat familiar with the wealth and population of the empire of Nicholas, and who are aware of the rigorous despotism by which the persons and property of his subjects can be at any time made available to the wants of the State, it will be easily understood that the war resources of Russia—the men, means and munitions which she can muster on case of exigency, are almost diminishable. The ambitious, politic and relig ious of Russia is one invest the Czar with boundless control over his subjects, and inspire them with a true reverence for their monarch, resulting in a cheerful obedience to all his behests. The standing army of Russia may be counted, but it is difficult to ascertain the number of soldiers which the Russian autocrat might bring into the field, otherwise than by estimating the probable number of male adults in a population of seventy millions of souls. Governing this immense population with a command as absolute and imperious as that of a master over his slave, and having the treasury overflowing with hundreds of millions of wealth, the Russian Emperor has proclaimed a solemn crusade against bowed liberty in Europe, and has already put forward a portion of his vast army and of the resources of his prodigious revenues with promptness and a resolute determination to prevail by force the spread of free principles, and to maintain the influence of absolutism where its former empire dominates.

To the anticipation of a design which might not appear a powerful or less powerful Nation is rushing forward with a steadiness, foresight and firmness that argue an immovable purpose. The prelude to the bloody drama about to be acted, will be the subjugation of Hungary, and the restoration of that rebellious province to the sway of the Austrian dominion. Should the rest of Europe submit to this Russian scheme to be successfully consummated, the dream of Republican freedom will be quickly over. Let Hungary be conquered, and Russia and Austria would win to turn their attention to those other powers, which have dared to ruffle the stagnant waters of despotism. They would speak upon Berlin, and overwhelm her struggling patriots; they would cover Paris with their armies and in the severe suppression for freedom which that people had just sent forth. They may even turn an eye to France, and as the great example of liberty incites the strife between the antagonistic principles of monarchy and republican society, they may resolve to make her atone for fault and retrace her path back into the darkness of political darkness.

This would be the natural course of events were Russia calmly permitted to pursue her atrocious designs. But we have not the slightest appreciation of so dastardly a policy on the part of the opposing powers. Were France and England and Italy would rent to the spread of Liberty, discretion and reckless of the progress of despotism, they could nevertheless not witness without serious fear the strides of usurpation a power as Russia towards attaining the supremacy of Western Europe. The instinct of self-preservation would impel them to resist, were better motives wanting. Such motives probably exist in France—the Statesmen of that ex-aut country perceive with prophetic vision into the inward and esoteric signification of the portentous manifestoe, which under the pretence of putting down anarchy, veils a stupendous project of conquest and aggression. Its real meaning was fully explained in the debates in the French Assembly, and it was incontrovertibly shewn, that the only faithful interpretation of that impious proclamation, which blasphemously invoked Divine aid to consecrate and protect the most execrable tyranny—was to construe it as a declaration of fierce hostility to the liberties of Europe.

The struggle is not distant. A few months in the history of nations is but a day in the ordinary calendar of Time. Long before the expiration of the present year, we look for a contest of which nearly all Europe will be the battle ground, and Freedom on one side, and Despotism on the other, will be the mighty combatants. The conflict will probably be protracted, ferocious and bloody. How it may end no man can predict, but there is not a heart on this side of the broad Atlantic, but must throb responsively to the efforts of the freemen of the old world; and not a tongue, but will offer up orisons at the throne of him who sways the destinies of nations, for the triumph of that cause which is inseparably linked with the dignity, progress and happiness of the human race.

Death of Mr. Polk confirmed.

The melancholy intelligence of the death of ex-President POLK is fully confirmed. The following despatches, received by the editor of the Memphis Eagle, but too truly establish the fact:

NASHVILLE, Friday, June 15.

Ex-President Polk is now lying in this city at the point of death. Last Wednesday evening he was attacked with something resembling cholera. Though he recovered from this, his constitution was so completely broken by its violence, that he is in expectation of his physicians he can survive but a few hours longer.

The number of deaths from cholera yesterday was about twenty—one colored female and two infants, the rest all white females. It is worse to day than it has been. The cases seem principally confined to College Hill.

Half past 2, P. M.

Mr. Polk is dead. The orders for interments at the cemetery to day, up to 11 o'clock, have been twenty-one. Seventeen deaths reported since that time, but the proportion of cholera cases not ascertained. The disease is rapidly increasing. Yesterday there were six deaths in the Hermitage district, in the neighborhood of Nashville.

Gen. Jessup is to have the place vacated by the death of Gen. Gaines.

Mississippi.—Messrs. Jacob Thompson and W. S. Featherston have been nominated as candidates for re-election to Congress in the 1st and 2d districts. Gov. A. G. Brown is a candidate for re-election in the 4th. In the 3d the Locofocos have not yet nominated a candidate. The Whig candidate is Col. A. B. Bradford, of Buena Vista memory. The Southron says no one need be surprised to see three Taylor Congressmen from Mississippi in the next Congress. The signs of the times are certainly suspicious, if the friends of the administration do their duty. With such candidates as Bradford, Harris and Gray in the first three districts, and A. G. Mayes probably in the fourth, the Taylor men have independent to put forth their energies to the utmost.

[Southern Line.]

BY MAGNETIC TELEGRAPH.

[TRANSMITTED TO THE N. O. BEE.]

We received yesterday the following interesting despatches. It will be seen that the capture of Buda, by the Hungarians is confirmed. Full commercial advices of the Liverpool Cotton market are appended.

FIRST DISPATCH.

BALTIMORE, June 16, 1849.

Liverpool, June 2.—The sales of Cotton for the week amount to 35,790 bales, of which 4,300 were taken for export and 700 on speculation. The stock consists of 667,000 bales, of which 500,000 are American.

No operations have taken place in New York.—All are waiting for the private letters.

It is reported in the Cambria's news that 60,000 muskets had been sent to Hungary by Turkey.—The Austrian troops had arrived at Radenski, where a battle ensued with the people, and was only ended by the withdrawal of the forces. [Thus at least we do we interpret the Delphic phraseology of our despatch.]

SECOND DESPATCH.

BALTIMORE, June 16, 1849

New York, Saturday, 10th, P. M.—The Cotton market is slightly firmer, and sales have been effected of 700 bales. Flour has advanced to $4 37 —Corn has improved. Sales have been made of 140, bushels of mixed, at 61c. New York commands $10 50 per bbl. Lard has improved. Rice at 3½c. per lb. Stocks have slightly receded. Treasury Notes 1-8 prem. New Loan 17 prem.

THIRD DESPATCH.

BALTIMORE, June 16th, 1849.

The steamship Cambria arrived at New York last evening. One days' later intelligence has been received from Europe.

London, June 2.—Consols brought 92. A Telegraphic report was received at Liverpool on the evening of the 2d, to the effect that DUPONT has been elected President of the French Assembly.—This news operated favorably on the French funds. Five per cents rose to 61¾, and three per cents to 52.

The French troops occupy the heights around Rome and are determined to enter the city.

The capture of Buda is fully confirmed. The principal officers were killed, and the Croatian officers and soldiers were put to the sword.

*Probably Dufaure. There is no Dupont among the members elect of the National Assembly.—[Ed. Bee.]

The Cholera in the West.

This terrible scourge appears to prevail with unusual inutility in the cities of the West and South-West. The despatch from Nashville shows that its ravages there are on the increase in Memphis—a small town numbering some five thousand souls—there were no less than twenty deaths from cholera on the 14th instant, chiefly women. In St. Louis, where it was believed that the epidemic was on the decline, it has re-appeared with renewed virulence. On the 12th, there were fifty-nine interments, of which forty-seven were from cholera, and on the 13th the number of interments was forty-eight, forty of them being fatal cases of cholera. During the week ending on the 11th inst., the total number of interments in St. Louis was 251, of which no less than 179 were of cholera. This is a fearful mortality in a city containing scarcely half the population of New Orleans.

In Cincinnati and Louisville the disease still lingers, though the mortality has greatly abated.

STEAMBOAT DISASTER.—Yesterday morning, at an early hour, the steamer Arkansas No. 1, Capt. Fenbre, while running through the Rigolets, came into collision with the steamer Gen. Hamer, Capt. Corzens—the former on her way to the city, the latter hence for Pensacola. The Arkansas sunk in ten minutes after the collision. Fortunately there was no loss of life. The passengers escaped from the sinking boat to the Gen. Hamer, and were subsequently taken off that vessel by the Jas. L. Day, Capt. Gibbons, and brought to this city. They, however, barely had time to get on the Hamer—many of them leaving their clothes and baggage behind them. The Arkansas was lying, when the Day left, with only the upper part of her deck visible.

SAD ACCIDENT.—It becomes our duty, says the Baton Rouge Gazette, to chronicle a most painful and heart-rending casuality, in the death of Wm. G. Elam, youngest son of James M. Elam, esq., of this town. This young lad, aged about 11 years, went, on Monday afternoon, to the river, near the saw mill, in company with two or three companions, for the purpose of fishing, and accidentally slipped from a raft on which he was standing into the river, and was drowned. A large number of citizens repaired to the spot, and every means were used by them to recover the body, in which they were finally successful. What renders this unfortunate accident doubly severe to the parents and relatives, is the fact that Mr. and Mrs. Elam have been to the North for about two months, on account of the severe indisposition of the former, and are daily expected to return. They have the sympathies of the whole community, in their sad bereavement.

ATTACK ON HYER.—An attack was made on the life of Thomas Hyer, the pugilist, at his store in the Bowery, New York, the other day. It appears that a woman inquired for him, and the moment she saw him, she discharged a pistol at him, and then fired at herself. The ball did not touch Hyer, but she succeeded in wounding herself severely, and it is feared mortally in the abdomen near the heart. Jealousy it is said was the cause of the act.

AT THEIR OWN GAME.—The Red River Republican says that the Democrats of Rapides are sneering at the Whig candidate for Governor. They style Gen. Decloust the "Frog candidate," the "Gumbo candidate," &c. We commend this intelligence to our Creole friends, and believe that they will show Locofocoism in November, of what stuff the "Gumbo candidate" is made.

NORTH CAROLINA.—We learn that on account of ill health, Mr. James W. Bryan has been compelled to resign his trust as the candidate for Congress of the Whigs in the Newbern district. His health has become too much impaired since his acceptance of the nomination to permit him to carry on an active canvass, therefore he retires from the field. Another convention is to be holden by the Whigs to bring out some one in the place of Mr. B.

☞ The hurricane which recently swept through a portion of South Alabama did much harm. At Grovehill, in Clark county, it laid the crops level with the ground. The corn, oats, and timber in its track suffered considerably. In Choctaw county, it was accompanied by a heavy fall of hail.

COLD WATER PRACTICE.—Last summer (says the New York Evening Post,) an Irish girl, on Long Island, attacked with fever and ague, and after being two or three times cured, as it was called by quinine, impatient at the obstinate recurrence of the disorder, ran in the height of the fever and jumped into a mill pond with her clothes on, she came out cured—the disorder never returned. An Ohio practitioner of the name of Cook adopts a similar practice; our readers are aware that with the learned it is called hydropathy.—The editor of the Lafayette Daily Journal thus describes the method in his own case:—

"He literally dragged me from my bed, forced me under a shower-bath while the chill was full on me, my lips, nose and fingers purple; my teeth chattering, and my whole corvulsed body giving terrible evidence of the severe nature of the malady. There he held me, changing my positions under the drip for more than a minute—AND THE CHILL WAS GONE! It was the second, and of congestive type, that I had had in the space of five hours. Next he put me under water blankets. I slept for over an hour. Finding the fever to be consuming me, he again pulled me out of bed, and forced me a second time under the bath. In less than five minutes, all traces of the fever had disappeared, and the bath, from having at first been horrible beyond description, became delightful; and I could have stood under it for hours, wooing the drooping of its congenial waters. I came out a restored man."

THE RIVER.—The Alexandria Republican, says—

The river here has risen rapidly for some days past, and is now within two or three feet of its bank. A crevasse has taken place at Smiley's old place, about ten miles below town, but has not done much damage.

We learn by the last boat from above, that the river was falling as far down as one hundred miles below Shreveport, but that another rise was coming down from above. It was thought, however, that it was not great enough to do any damage as low down as this. The planters in this section, are represented as having been almost overpowered, and much damage has been done by them to the crops high up the River.

City Intelligence.

THE CREVASSE.—Some enquiries having been made as to the stage of water which Messrs. Dunbar and Burgi had to encounter since they took charge of the works at the crevasse; we will state that when Captain Grant abandoned the undertaking the river had receded about 14 inches from the 19th March to Oregon, to load lumber for the San Francisco market.

At the time of the Carter's departure, nothing definite was known of the golden treasures in California. The substance of what had transpired relative thereto was comprised in two letters originally published in this paper—one from our regular correspondent, Mr Colton, then at Monterey, and the other from Mr. Larkin, U. S. Government agent at Monterey. By the way, it may be stated that Mr. Larkin is now the wealthiest man in California. Vacating his real estate at San Francisco, at what it was worth at the last advices, he would be doubtless the richest man in North America. The statements of Messrs. Colton and Larkin, respecting the mineral wealth of California, were received with great distrust and suspicion. It was thought they had been deceived by land owners, and other interested parties were interested in diffusing information calculated to produce increased emigration from the United States—but little credit was given here to the gold stories, that the Carter, offering excellent state-room accommodations for passengers, carried out only two, and those in the second cabin. But we suppose that Mr. Wood reposed entire confidence in those representations, based upon an intimate knowledge of the parties from whom they were received, and we are glad to know that it has been amply justified by the result.

We announced the clearance of the Carter on the 18th October last, in the following paragraph:

"The bark John W. Carter cleared yesterday at Custom House, cautioner for California, with an immense assortment of dry goods, with $70,000 in specie."

Their cargo would supply a very extensive country store, comprehending almost every line of business known to our merchants. How much further West will our people go in search of new fields of enterprise."—N. Y. Journal of Commerce June 11th.

MURDER.—We are called on to chronicle the murder of one of our own neighbors, in the streets of Asheville, to which we alluded in our last. On Monday, the 25th May, Mr. James F. Bell and Mr. Peter Dearman, brothers-in-law, both living near town, and both men of families, got into a quarrel over the grocery of Mrs Coche, and after several words had passed and attempts failed to get them to drop it, they engaged in a scuffle, in which the latter was thrown to the ground by the former, who struck him on or about the head with the bar, without any apparent resistance by Dearman, till Bell suddenly jumped, and Dearman remarked, "now he got it from my pocket," and rose with a terrible bowie knife in his hand, made at Bell, who succeeded in showing him off, and getting up a rock with which he instantly felled him to the earth, "knocking the knife out of his hand, which was picked up by the father of Bell, handed to Wm. Williams, Esq., Dearman still trying to get hold of it, and by him sent to the grocery above mentioned. Bell made towards the grocery, and on being asked if he was not cut, looked down, saw the blood, and said he believed he was. He was immediately led down, stripped, and Dr. Hilliard sent for, who probed the wound and dressed it, not being able to ascertain at the time the extent to which the knife had penetrated. Bell was pronounced dangerous. A process was issued for the arrest and trial of Dearman, which was executed the same evening, and he was committed to jail in failing to give bond for the sum of three hundred dollars. Frequent discharges of blood on Tuesday gave evidence that the wound was mortal; nature gradually gave way, till death consummated its work, which occurred on Friday, at 1 o'clock, A. M.—Highland Messenger, 7th inst.

M. PROUDHON.—The mystery which enveloped the abode where M. Proudhon had retired, has been discovered, he lives now in Geneva, in the house of M. Fazy, chief of the democrats in Switzerland, and chief of the banque that that of M. Froment, professor of mathematics, and political refugee from Belgium. It appears that M. Proudhon, when he was living in Paris, was courted by the daughter of a lace maker, and had for a rival a young man employed in the store of the future father-in-law of the celebrated socialist. When M. Proudhon was obliged to flee out of Paris, by the nature of the "Bank of the People," and the writs rendered against him for articles published in the journal Le Peuple, a love correspondence took place between him and the young lady. The rival of M. Proudhon intercepted one of her letters, which, very curious to say, was translated by a piece of poetry, directed to the old maid by the French Fourrierite, in which she calls him "My angel!" Our readers who understand the French language will appreciate the poetry, which is as follows:

Du desert de la vie, en parcourant la grève
Un ange est apparu, un ange de bonheur,
Qui m'indique soudain quelque rive, ou rêve
Et par son doux accueil, me fait battre le cœur.

Pour moi, mon ascension, inquiète et demente,
Sans cesse cherche et fouille à l'ange d'écrire.
Tu seras mon ange pur, et mon ami divin encore,
Au monde j'existerai, tu me sera pas a pas.
