NIGHT SCHOOLS.

[illegible] of the success of our unrivalled system of Public Schools, the several Municipalities have been striving to surpass each other in the [illegible] for the improvement of the human mind. An emulation so noble in [illegible] has resulted in the most immense good; every day witnesses some amelioration in the [illegible] the great principle of [illegible] which raised [illegible] to the proud position which she occupies, is the intelligence, perseverance and enlightened [illegible] of her people.

[illegible] the means which have been recently adopted to extend [illegible] advantages of Public Education [illegible] New Orleans. The Directors of the [illegible] Second Municipality, always [illegible] useful ness of this class of citizens [illegible] very commendable, have, after [illegible] liberality of imposing heavy [illegible] on accumulated capital, argued that [illegible] improvements in passing operate directly to [illegible] the city by enhancing the [illegible] property, and secures a reduction of [illegible] heavy licenses from $20 to $10 for [illegible] The petition also points out the [illegible] condition of New Levee, [illegible] and Front Levee streets, and of other [illegible] and calls upon the authorities [illegible] for repairs effected as soon as [illegible]

[illegible] to the Council of the [illegible] Second Municipality are confined [illegible] with the wretched state of some [illegible] of the thoroughfares through which [illegible] must pass in the exercise of their [illegible]

[illegible] reading and adoption of these memorials, a resolution introduced by Mr. Thacker [illegible] appointing a committee of twenty, [illegible] them to the respective bodies. The [illegible] was addressed by Messrs R. M. Carr[illegible], Duncan and other gentlemen, and the [illegible] as were ordered to be published in all [illegible] papers except the Bulletin.

We have read the petition to the General [illegible] with some attention. It is perfectly [illegible] in tone, and embodies it with condensed [illegible] several very strong arguments [illegible] the point so assumed by the drays [illegible] the tax imposed upon them is unjust [illegible] from labor and not from capital, [illegible] the subject will be dispassionately [illegible] and that, if possible, the grievances [illegible] stated or by a numerous and highly use[illegible] community may be remedied.

[illegible] WEATHER.—The cold snap has come at [illegible] brought with it a glorious sunshine and a [illegible] atmosphere. Bracing and delicious [illegible] temperature—cold enough to excite [illegible] exercise, but not pinching and bitter [illegible] severity. It is, in fact, just such weather [illegible] we have a right to expect about the beginning of December. Our only apprehension [illegible] that it will disappear before we appreciate [illegible] sweetness. Winter with us is ever a capricious season—now frosty, now sloppy—biting [illegible] keen blasts at one time, and at another [illegible] forcing you to doff superfluous habiliments and extinguish roaring fires. No country [illegible] was ever more uncertain of mood than a [illegible] meteorology of New Orleans.

☞ We are indebted to the obliging officers of the steamers Ohio and Grand Turk for late Cincinnati and St. Louis papers.

ALABAMA.—A telegraphic dispatch from Montgomery to the Mobile Advertiser, dated the 29th, says: After five ineffectual ballotings last evening for the second U. S. Senator, the two Houses adjourned over to this morning. Today at 12 o'clock, the joint session was resumed, and on the first ballot, JEREMIAH CLEMENS, Esq. of Madison county, was elected over ex-Gov. Fitzpatrick. The following is the vote: Clemens Hunker Democrat 67; Fitzpatrick (Chivalry Democrat) 58; Scattering 5.

The Whigs voted for Clemens.

STEAMBOAT COLLISION.—As the Latona was coming into the steamboat-landing, about eight o'clock on Saturday night, a towboat, name unknown, having a barge in tow, ran foul of her, striking her about midships, tearing away her upper works on the starboard side, fore and aft and making a complete wreck of her. The Latona lost some ten or fifteen bales cotton overboard, and one of her engineers was badly crushed by the concussion.

AMERICAN THEATRE.—Signora Ciocca and Signor Nani—two dancers of very high reputation, from Italy—make their first appearance in New Orleans this evening, at the American Theatre, in the beautiful ballet, "Giselle." Our citizens are very familiar with this ballet, and entertain a lively recollection of Biangy's magnificent presentation of the principal character. Signora Ciocca will indeed achieve a triumph, should she succeed in effacing that remembrance. We look for something more than usually attractive. The Northern papers speak of the new comers as artists unsurpassed by any who have visited our shores, except Fanny Elssler.

☞ Mr. McClintock, who committed the murder on Wednesday, has been consigned to jail without an examination, to await his trial before the Criminal Court, which, we believe, sits on Monday.

☞ Thanks to the officers of the steamboat Montgomery, for late Natchez papers.

HORRIBLE CASE OF KILLING.—A most melancholy occurrence took place in Philadelphia, on the 23d ult. Mr Charles A. Snyder, a resident of Kensington, while passing along Girard Avenue, was shot and instantly fell dead. It appeared, upon evidence before the coroner, that several men were firing at a mark, above the point where the casualty occurred, during the afternoon, and down to the time of the fatal shot. They, upon the testimony, rendered a verdict that the deceased came to his death from a gun shot, in the hands of William Cornmerly or John Williams, on the evening of the 23d of November."

The above named men were then arrested and taken before Alderman Clark, who, after a hearing, committed them to prison. The deceased was about 35 years of age, and has left a family.

A MINER ROBBED.—A letter in the N. York Commercial, from Carlisle, Schoharie county, N. Y., says that on Tuesday last an aged Dutchman, named Peter Becker, who has been boarding for years at the spectre he could get, was robbed of all he had, (nearly $4000.) About 2 o'clock on the morning above mentioned three men in disguise broke open the outside door with a large stone, and entering the house, one of them seized a son of Mr. Becker, and, shouting him on the bed, held him by the throat, threatening both him and his wife with instant death if they resisted or made the least noise. The other two then proceeded to rifle the chest containing the money, which was mostly in gold and silver, deposited in small tin trunks and cut cases. These they emptied into bags, which they appeared to have on hand for the purpose, and after threatening the inmates of the house with death, if they attempted to alarm the neighbors, made their escape with the rich booty.

HON. GIDEON M. MONROE.—We regret to learn, through a correspondent of the Lawrenceburg Herald, that "the health of the Hon. George McDuffie continues to decline, and it is next to impossible for him to survive much longer."

The Fire at Providence.

The Providence Journal gives some particulars of the extensive conflagration in that city, in which Mrs. Jenkins and her daughter met their fate. The fire was first discovered about three o'clock in the morning, by Miss Sarah Jenkins, who, with her sister, slept in the south west room of the second story. She gave the alarm, and Mrs Jenkins and her son, Moses B. Jenkins, who occupied the north west room, both rushed into the chamber occupied by the two sisters. They found the room full of smoke, and the house in flames. They first attempted to escape by passing down stairs, but the heat and smoke drove them back, and they returned to the chamber. One of the servants, who had escaped from a back chamber, came under the window and brought a ladder, by which Moses descended—

The youngest daughter leaped from the window upon the roof of the porch over the front door, from which she was afterwards taken by a ladder.

The bodies of Mrs. Jenkins and of her daughter Sarah were found in the morning in the room, among the ruins of the house. The probability is that they perished from suffocation, and before the flames touched them. The other persons in the house escaped. All this time the servant in whose room Mrs. Jenkins had slept was safe, and but for the fatal mistake of stopping in the other room, all would have probably been saved.

Mrs Jenkins was 52 years of age; her daughter Sarah was 32 years of age. Mrs Jenkins was the daughter of William Almy, and the grand-daughter of Moses Brown, from each of whom she inherited wealth, that she devoted to the most noble purposes. She was an eminent member and minister of the Society of Friends, but her sympathies were not bounded by sect or creed, and wherever there was suffering of body or mind, there she found her place and mission. She had lately returned from a visit to Europe, where she had gone for religious purposes.

MR. CALHOUN.—We clip the following from the Pendleton Messenger, as clearly indicative of the position of the illustrious Southron on the question of a Southern Convention.

"THE MISSISSIPPI CONVENTION.—We are glad to see from almost all quarters in the South, the hearty approbation given to the proceedings of the Convention which lately met in this State. The articles which we publish from the Portsmouth (Va.) Pilot and the Charleston Courier, may be taken as an indication of the feelings of the true men of both political parties. The people, without distinction of party, are rising in determined resistance to the aggressions of the North, and woe to any political hack who shall try to restrain their just indignation, by those old cant-words, Democracy and Whiggery, which have been heretofore employed—"Watch and wait' is no longer the policy; but action—united, Southern action—is now absolutely necessary to save the Union from destruction, and, I hope, will not be neglected by us ourselves.

"We hardly supposed it necessary to say any thing about the position of 'our great statesman,' in relation to this movement; but, as doubts seem to have been entertained in some quarters, it may be proper to say that he goes to the action of the people of Mississippi his cordial support and approbation. United action, on the part of the slave States, through a Southern Convention, is what we always considered as the end aimed to be accomplished by the Southern Address."

The Pacific Railroad Project.

LOUISVILLE, Nov. 23.

A large meeting of our citizens, favorable to the construction of a railroad to the Pacific, was held at the court house last night.

Mr. Whitney addressed the meeting at some length, explaining his plan for building the proposed road, and was listened to with profound attention and interest.

Resolutions were adopted approving of Mr. Whitney's plan, and recommending its immediate adoption.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 23—P. M.

DARING ROBBERY—ASSAULT—FALSE PRETENCES, &c.—A daring robbery was committed on Wednesday night, in the Northern Liberties. The door store of Wm. B. Gerkens, was entered and the money drawer forced open, and robbed of all the cash. The robbers took away with them the fire-proof chest, containing the books and papers, and about $40 in cash. The books and papers were found, yesterday morning, on a lot upon the Cohocksink creek; but the cash, which was about three feet high, has not yet been recovered.

George W. Schell was brought before the Mayor this morning, charged with committing an assault and battery upon James McCoombe, on the 8th inst., at the sum of $8,500 as answer. This charge is a cross-action under the following circumstances:—Several weeks ago, Mr. Schell and his wife, while passing along Market street near Ninth, in the evening, were assailed by the complainant and another young man, and his wife grossly insulted by them. He resented the insult by knocking one or both of them down, whereupon they assaulted him in a violent manner, and in the melee Mr. Schell was stabbed in several places on his body, and, in consequence, confined to the hospital for nine or ten days. After his recovery he preferred a charge against Schell and his companion, and they were held to bail in the sum of $9,500,

Arrest of ship Natchez—Pocket Picked—Probable Murder Case, &c.

[Correspondence of the Baltimore Patriot.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 23—P. M.

The ship Natchez, about whose safety some apprehension was entertained, arrived this morning, after a passage of one hundred and seventy-seven days from Canton, with a valuable cargo. She had constant head winds and gales, and received considerable damage in sails, rigging and hull.

John Henry Lenhard, who has lately arrived from England with the family of Capt. Sutter, of Sutter's Fort, bound for California, had his pocket picked yesterday, while riding in a Broadway omnibus, of a book containing a certificate of deposit of $2,700 in the Seamen's Savings Bank, and one for $1,300 in the Chemical Bank; also a cabin passage-ticket for Chagres, in the Empire City, and one in the Panama, from Panama to San Francisco, together with a pass-book or passport from the American Minister at London.

The two men wounded at the fracas in Burns' bowling saloon, yesterday morning, are still alive, but it is feared that their wounds will result fatally. The shot that wounded Elliott was fired by Burns, and, it is said, was done while endeavoring to rescue his wife from the grasp of Elliott.

Mr. Clay is still in the city, the observed of all observers. Upon a second visit to Wallstreet, on Thursday, he was greeted with six cheers. He dined with Stephen Whitney. Among other visits on Thursday, Mr. Clay called upon his old friend, D. Austin Muir, at his residence in Abingdon square. Both there and at Aldermen's he was called upon by troops of friends and admirers.

The last accounts from the steamer Eudora on the beach near Cape May, represent that a large part of her cargo would be saved in a damaged state. There is no hope of saving her hull.

E. G. Wilders, the patentee of the iron safe bearing his name, has recovered $20,000 in the U. S. District Court, from S. C. Herring, on a contract made with the defendant to manufacture and sell such safes in the State of New York, on condition that he paid to the plaintiff one cent per lb. on all safes so sold by him. For the defence it was contended that the plaintiff's right for the patent is as yet in dispute.

The same Court has also before it the case of Manuel H. Harmony vs. David H. Mitchell—an action growing out of the Mexican war. Harmony was a Chihuahua trader, and was proceeding to San Juan with a large quantity of goods in wagons. The defendant, Lieut. Col. Mitchell, was then attached to the Missouri mounted volunteers, under Col. Doniphan, and by his orders seized the goods and wagons, and they were used as a barrier for the army at the battle of Brazito. From thence they were taken to Chihuahua, and when the United States army left it the goods remained there and were seized by the Mexican authorities. The present suit is to recover the value of the goods, and the amount claimed for them is $125,000.

The Embezzlement Case, &c.

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 23

The Criminal Court has been engaged with the trial of Nathaniel Childs, charged with embezzling the funds of the Missouri Bank, nearly three weeks. The Commonwealth closed today at noon. To-morrow the witnesses for the defence will be heard. It is understood that but few witnesses will be examined on the part of the defence.

The evidence against the accused is merely circumstantial, and it appears to be the general impression that a verdict of acquittal will be rendered.

A large stable at Vandalia was destroyed by fire a few days since, and forty horses burned to death.

More Defaulters—Appointment.

[Correspondence of the New York Courier.]

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21, 1849.

Purser Kennon, of Virginia, has been dismissed from the Naval service for being a defaulter to the amount of several thousand dollars, and the claim against him has been turned over to the proper legal officer of the Government, for the prosecution against his bondsmen. This vacancy in the corps will probably be filled by the President to-morrow, if appointments are considered.

Mr. Johnston, of Penn., brother of the present Governor, has been designated for the Consulate at Glasgow, a position which, from its advantage of position and profit, attracted the incumbrancer-candidates among applicants for remediable minor appointments.

MACON, (GA.) Nov 21.

MURDER.—A barbarous murder was committed at a wagon yard in the outskirts of our city on Wednesday night last, between nine and ten o'clock. The murderer is by the name of Barge, who came here from Morgan county, with a load of cotton. The person murdered was Richard Altman, of Crawford county, who came here for the purpose of hauling goods. They had stopped at different wagon yards, and were unacquainted with each other. After dark, Altman visited the yard where Barge had stopped, who was absent at the time. A half hatchet, which he had in his hand, was knocked out of it by some one, in jest, which he supposed to be picked up by a negro of Barge's, of which he accused him, but did not succeed in finding him. No difficulty or consequence occurred, and Altman went to the other yard where he had stopped, entered a building and commenced to eat his supper. At this moment Barge came up to the door with two or three other wagoners, and his negro, and called to Altman to come out. He would flog him. As Altman stepped near the door, when he received a very severe stab in the right breast from Barge, of which he died almost instantly. Barge fled immediately to his wagon, took one of his horses and rode off before any effort could be made to arrest him. Both the parties, we understand, were young men, without families. Both parties were entirely sober at the time, and there is good reason to believe that the murderer was urged on by his comrades.—Messenger.

THE TWO PRESIDENTS.—That famous old liberal, Walter Savage Landor—who was a liberal in the day of Castlereagh, and still loves freedom as devotedly as ever—has published a letter in the London Examiner, in which, says the Philadelphia Bulletin, he draws a parallel between the American and the French President, not much to the credit of the latter. We have not room for the entire epistle, though all of it is excellent. Landor says that Louis Napoleon, if he had understood his true policy, would have put himself at the head of the liberal movement in Europe; but that, having chosen to be the secret tool of absolutism, he has rendered himself infamous to all time. A reference is made to the tone employed by the French Government towards America; and the manly firmness of General Taylor on the occasion is commended. This brings Landor to his parallel. He says:

"Arrogance is broken into foam when it dashes on the western shores of the Atlantic. America knows equally her interests and her dignity. Averse to war, averse to the politics of Europe, she is greatly more than a match against the united powers of that continent. Engineer me her money; and she will have it, although, like many a civil suit, the contest may cost her greatly more than the demands. She is not to be shuffled off or brought to a compromise for a minor piece of trickery. The amount of money is not in question. The question is, whether the Americans are to be treated as ignominously and superciliously as the Italians. At the head of the United States is a brave, temperate, a sagacious man; no falsehood of word or deed could ever be objected to him. Americans, I hope, will pardon me in comparing their President (the indignity is unintentional) with the President of France. In one we behold the grave, sedate, veracious Englishman of England's go; in the other, animated, not indeed by a better spirit, but by a spirit moving over vast and discordant populations, with strength to direct their energies and assign their course; the other without any first principles, any determinate line of conduct, swearing to republicanism before the people, abjuring it before the priesthood, undermining it at home, battering it down abroad, delighted at transient cheers on a railroad, deaf to the distant voice of history, following his uncle where the way is notorious, deviating where it is straight, and stopping in the midst of it to bow with equal obsequiousness to the Mufti and two religions. Symptomal of such a character is the tree of liberty—a tree to surround at root, shriveled at top, shedding its leaves on the laborers who plant it, and concealing the nakedness of its branches in the flutter of the garlands that bedizen it.

Sometimes a preference makes poor amends for a comparison; but America will pardon me thus weighing a sound President against a hollow one. Temperate and strong as she is, she will treat arrogant petulance with calm derision. The resources of France, she well knows, are inadequate to set afloat, with soldiers and stores, any fleet that could make an impression. Her soldiers would find no field of operations, until by the humanity and munificence of their captors, they should be employed in leveling the road to California. Beside, the Americans would rather see them perform an easier and more voluntary duty. Not only in commerce with the nations of Europe, but infinitely beyond them, those on the Atlantic are with abhorrence the wrongs and cruelties committed against the ancient and longest free of any on our continent. Europe and Asia rise up simultaneously from a deathlike lethargy, which long held them against more outrageous insolence, more unprovoked ferocity. The god of Mahomet is called on by the Mercifuls. The god of Mahomet is called by his worship in not the worship of lip or knee. Because the disciple of Mahomet is merciful to the follower of Christ, is Christian passionate threatens him with a war! America will not strike down the arm of France if she defends for once the cause of humanity and honor. From no sympathy will she retire; but from jealousy lest England should become more popular and powerful in the East.

SUICIDE.—Daniel Walden, Chas. Chas. Geo. Diser and P. Michel, were arrested on Friday night by Jas. Brooks, officer of the customs, having been detected in the act of smuggling cabbers from the ship William, four bags of kirschwasser. They will be examined to day before U. S. Commissioner Baldwin.

SUFFERINGS OF TWO SAILORS.—Cases of individual suffering at sea, caused by the various perils to which the mariner is exposed, are of frequent occurrence, and their recital cannot fail to awaken the sympathy of those who are exempt from the dangers attending "those who go down to the sea in ships, and do business upon the great waters." We recently read in an old paper an account of the suffering of two sailors, which furnishes a striking instance of the power of endurance sometimes exhibited under deprivations of the most disheartening character. The incident occurred in 1837. Two sailors belonging to an English frigate at Malta, having been ashore on liberty, and much intoxicated, undertook to go on board in the evening in a little boat. One of them, named Cope, soon fell asleep in the bottom of the boat, and Chambers, his shipmate, after having lost overboard the oar with which he was sculling, followed the example of his companion. The boat drifted out to sea, and on awaking the next morning, they found themselves entirely cut off from the land, with the wind and current against them, and only one oar to aid them in returning to Malta. They continued in sight of the island for two days, but on the third day they found themselves in the middle of the Mediterranean—no land in sight—without provisions or water, and drifting about at the mercy of the winds and waves.

This was but the commencement of their sufferings, which were soon more than could suppose human nature could bear. Once or twice they caught a little water when it rained, in the bottom of the boat, but it was so mixed with salt water, that it tended to increase rather than assuage their thirst. On the fifth day, not having seen any vessel, they gave up all hope, and resolved to meet the dreadful death which seemed inevitable, with due resignation, comforting themselves with the reflection that the boat would probably be picked up, and their dead bodies would prove that they had not unwillingly deserted from their ship. They engaged by solemn oaths, that in case one died before the other, the survivor should not feast on the body of his shipmate.

Another day passed, when the boat leaking, and being nearly half filled with water, Cope made an effort to bail out the water with his hat. But Chambers gave himself up to despair; his reason at length deserted him, cramps had seized his limbs, he was the picture of famine, the prey of a devouring fever, his mouth foamed, his tongue was swelled to a frightful size, and his eyes had lost all their wonted brilliancy.

On the eighth day, Chambers made a convulsive effort and jumped into the water; Cope threw towards him a rope, but the hapless mariner noticed it not, and soon sank to rise no more. The next day, twenty six hours after the death of Chambers, a vessel hove in sight, directing a course directly towards the boat — Cope had hardly the strength to power the oar as a signal of distress by waving his hat. It proved to be an Ionian polacre, bound in Constantinople. Cope was taken on board, and being treated with kindness and prudence, soon recovered. It was on the 15th of April that the boat was driven to sea from Malta; it was picked up on the 25th, during which time there were but two days—nothing into their stomachs but a few mouthfuls of brackish water, a case probably unparalleled in the annals of shipwrecks. This was paying a fearful penalty for intemperance.—Boston Journal.
