GEN. DOWNS, OF LOUISIANA.

We copied yesterday a Submission paper emanating from Ohio, in which we find the following sketch of General Downs, made at Cincinnati, by Lucius on the 7th instant, and as correctly, we think, portraying the position of party:

"We would say to our Democratic friends and State Rights men, turned out in the remarks, 'a morning man will catch at a straw.' They are the Democracy by putting forward Gen. Downs, who was at one time a good Democrat and State Rights man, but who was now what like our great 'Tam' Foote, of this State, and wants to pin himself to the coattail of Henry Clay, and Webster the Abolitionist.

The foregoing delectable paragraph forms the commencement of an article in the last Natchez Courier, written in the Free-soil, tomahawk style so dear to that paper, whenever it treats of the Compromise or its friends. Were any party attacks confined to the Free Trader we would be the last to notice them, but when a violation of all the courtesies of political warfare is notorious for its abuse, its frequent violation of all the courtesies of decency at least whenever it undertakes to speak of those whom it chooses to brand as 'Southern cowards.' We might safely leave Gen. Downs to the retaliatory of the Free Trader, on the score of his private character, but when we find a man who has been in the most assiduous attendance upon the Democratic party in Ohio every session of Congress, and who, in connection with Governor Corwin, has supported Fillmore and Webster in every measure of importance, and who, at the last attempted to vindicate his course from the charges of the Free Trader, and was rebuked by Mr. Rousseau, of Louisiana, in the House of Representatives, for his course in relation to Cuba, we think it time to speak out. Gen. Downs has been elected, in consequence of his recent course, to the well-nigh impossible task of reconciling the Democracy of Ohio to the Compromise, and supporting the course of the Democratic Administration, and, next, the nearly denied sentiment of a vast majority of the party who elected him to the station. How occupied he is to the fulfillment of this task we will not, and cannot, believe. Until the moment when the Compromise was submitted to the U. S. Senate, no Democrat in the State of Louisiana has been more outspoken in the denunciation of the Compromise than Gen. Downs. He has been found in all meetings of the Democracy of Louisiana, from the first meeting in the city of New Orleans, to the last meeting in the country, that gave any expression of opinion on the subject, that was not in favor of the Compromise, and opposed to the Union of the South
