THE DAILY BEE.

Tuesday Morning, June 19, 1866.

(☞ The Northern Mail train is here filled exclusively for newspapers mess through to destination.

SOME NEWS.

As a remarkable fact in these remarkable times, it is almost impossible to find a column of Indiana, in the responsible part of the press, which is not devoted to the support of Andrew Johnson and the North Western States, as against the Congressional majority of the country. With the New Orleans butchery, the Memphis massacre, the Tennessee outrages, the Kentucky bloodshed, the Ohio Speaker law, the obstructions to anti-slavery legislation, the Missouri test oath, the Maryland disfranchisement, the Kansas veto of the Freedmen's Bureau bill, the Colorado veto of the Territorial bill, the Nebraska veto of the Territorial bill, and the Nevada veto of the Territorial bill, all in a word that are now the grounds of the Democratic opposition to the Congressional majority, the Democratic press of Indiana is almost unanimously with the Democratic party. Accordingly, they regard it not worth while to notice the fact that the Congressional majority, by passing, over the vetoes of the Executive, the Freedmen's Bureau bill, the Civil Rights bill, and the Colorado bill, have established the supremacy of the loyal people of the country as a "Congressional party."

The Home of Representatives was nearly all October, and the session in the Senate, though materially lengthened, has been confined in a short and shabby manner. The Democratic press, however, has not been content with these condition towards its chief object—the restoration of the country. Accordingly, they spread it out over the whole field of politics, and have been engaged in a general assault upon the Republican party, their leader, and the principles by which it was overthrown between the two years.

Discussed to, 1865.

Just one year ago this morning, the news of the surrender of Lee's army reached Washington. The National Democrats in the House, though materially weakened by the withdrawal of the Southern members, were still in a majority. The Democratic press, throughout the country, had been encouraged to expect, and no one had the slightest apprehension that the Congressional majority would not be overthrown at the next election. Accordingly, they spread out over the whole field of politics, and have been engaged in a general assault upon the Republican party, their leader, and the principles by which it was overthrown between the two years.

Mr. McMASTERS stated that Brown had been arrested on the charge of treason against the State, and was committed to prison to await his trial. He was also charged with the murder of Colonel Sharpe, who was killed in the attack on the arsenal. He was also charged with the murder of Colonel Sharpe, who was killed in the attack on the arsenal. He was also charged with the murder of Colonel Sharpe, who was killed in the attack on the arsenal.

Mr. McMASTERS stated that Brown had been arrested on the charge of treason against the State, and was committed to prison to await his trial