THE REFORM TICKET.

It gives an unparalleled satisfaction to the progress which the Reform ticket is hourly making, and the favor with which it is received by the masses. We have been especially gratified at observing the large number of respectable Democrats who have joined the Reform ticket, and the officers who will of course adhere to their party nomination, but outside these we have seen a large number of the democracy composed of men of intelligence and probity, who are fully aware that a party which is the creature of one or two political affairs when it becomes necessary for patriotic and high-minded citizens of all parties to unite in a common effort for reform. The Reform ticket is the only one which is not a mere party ticket, but one which is the result of a general feeling of indignation against the existing administration, and which is the result of a general feeling of indignation against the existing administration, and which is the result of a general feeling of indignation against the existing administration.
