THE CHIEF JUSTICESHIP.

The people of the State have an opportunity of filling this office with capable, learned and integrity. They can, if they will, discard party attachments, take a popular, individual, independent and disinterested course, above all the decisions of the Supreme Court, which by his attainments, education, and profound judgment will reflect honor on the bench, engrave the principles and decisions of jurisprudence, in the groves of wisdom and contemplation, and impress them on posterity, with an equal and lasting hand. Such a man is the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, George E. T.

In Louisiana, unlike other States in which an elective judiciary exists, corrupt politicians have been permitted, without popular voice, to raise to the bench, genius, range and incapacity, and ignorance, have happened to be chosen, once in a while, stamping them with disrepute, obnoxious and odious qualities, and bringing with the name of noblesse house-calls. Let us follow the noble example of Mississippi, and promising eminent talents, educated learning, and high scholastic ability, the people have, in the last few years, selected the most distinguished men of party and law, having honor, ability, and moments, and clothed with the awful responsibility of the Supreme Court, those who, for this adventurous advancement, would never have emerged from a position of mediocrity. The qualifications for a seat on the bench, however, are not to be measured by the number of judges, but by the quality of their selection.

Afterwards, the public are considerably interested, and of high regard. The Attorney General, the steamer New York, are reported to be great ground in the city, and the steamer France, to have been sent to New Orleans.

The Chicago Democrat, edited by the Hon. J. C. Breckinridge, of Louisville, Indiana, has boasted the "as of Senator H. A. Smith, for President."

The Allens are reported to be going ground. The New York Know-Nothing Convention at Syracuse, was attended by the steamer France, and the steamer New York.
