DEVELOPMENTS

The election of President Buchanan was undoubtedly the result of the success of the Democratic party in Pennsylvania at the October election. On that occasion, the opposition tickets were defeated by 1715 votes. It was charged at the time that this majority was the result of the prevalence of the "black" vote in Philadelphia city, where the Democratic party were deemed to be predominant. These frauds were deemed so patent by W. M. May, the opposition candidate, that he refused to accept the result. The frauds were deemed so patent by W. M.
