MEXICO—INTERESTING DOCUMENTS

The New York Herald publishes two important documents relative to Mexico. The first is a voluminous and elaborate exposition by ex-President COMONFORT of the principles and policy upon which he sought to conduct his administration; the other a view of the conduct of the deposed resident of Mexico, and of the position of that distracted country, of the divisions of parties, and the objects aimed at by the several leaders. Gen. COMONFORT's manifesto is written in a spirit of calmness and moderation, evincing sincerity of intention, if not boldness of resolution. He maintains that the whole course of his administration was based upon a desire to achieve wholesome, necessary and prudent reforms, to combine liberty with order, to repress license, anarchy and insubordination, and if practicable, to secure to Mexico the full enjoyment of rational and law-regulated freedom. The first step towards the accomplishment of these objects was the annihilation of the powerful and pernicious influence of the clergy. The attempt to curtail ecclesiastical privileges enlisted nearly the entire priesthood of Mexico in open opposition to COMONFORT, and the effort to repress disorder alienated the great body of the army. The upshot of the ex-President's long winded manifesto is that with all his good intentions he was unable to resist two such formidable antagonists. The conclusion hinted at, rather than expressed, is that he fell because he was too patriotic to betray his country, and too pure to tolerate corruptions. COMONFORT, however, is not discouraged by failure. He still hopes for the ultimate triumph of peace, liberty and public order.

There is little doubt in the mind of any impartial observer that General COMONFORT is an honest man. But unfortunately in Mexico honesty will supplies the place of vigor. COMONFORT forfeited the support of the few energetic and capable public men of that country by his weakness and vacillation. He saw very well what was needed, but had not the iron resolution requisite to achieve success. At his measures stopped short in the emergency. He did enough to arouse animosity, but not enough to crush it. He went forth to combat the tiger, and then fled before the enraged animal. He declared war against the clergy, and suffered them to foment sedition against his rule. He beheld the treachery of the army, yet lacked the power or the will to nip it in the bud. With a friendly disposition he was unarmable, and when civil war reared its mascreated front in Mexico, COMONFORT was destitute of the means of resistance, and was among the earliest to succumb.—Men of his stamp are not rare in Mexico; but it is a stauncher breed that is required, to combine the honorable principles and genuine patriotism of a COMONFORT with the administrative ability, vigorous intellect and indomitable volition of a SANTA ANNA, and the united elements might yet be potent enough to save Mexico. But where are they to be found?

The letter of the old resident of Mexico traces the troubles which afflict that country to a low tender and forbearing spirit than that of COMONFORT. He points out the incapacity of Mexico for popular government, or even for endurance, her ferocity, her subjection to a brutal and bloody military rule, her invincible proneness to revolution, her absolute ignorance of the plainest principles of finance, and the consequent bankruptcy of her national exchequer. He demonstrates the extreme weakness of the federal government, and the lawless independence of the several States. All governments are alike in Mexico. Every one is as rapacious, as profligate, as tyrannic, as barren of good, as revolting in its tyranny, as oppressive towards the people as the clamorous demagogue successor. Whatever may be the form of government, says he, it is still the same ruthless, inquisitorial authority, discussed under different names, so that the nominal republic is and ever has been transformed into a military despotism, with soldiers and munitions planted in different sections of the country, while the unwieldy machinery for the collection of such kind is the sole will of the dictator, whose nature is often sacrilegiously sanctioned by the sacred names of "God and Liberty." The people of Mexico are pronounced inherently treacherous and deceitful, and wanting in the true elements of self-government. Society is destitute of well settled principles of virtue, honor and integrity. Men are educated to intrigue, craft, selfishness and venality. The influence of the clergy is boundless, and is exerted to maintain in the thick darkness that pervades the public mind.

Whether one or the other of the two parties engaged in deadly strife shall triumph, the result will not ensure permanent peace or stability to Mexico. The vice of that nation is radical and inherent, and therefore it is to be removed by temporary remedies. The cure must be effected by a mode of treatment we have often indicated, and which, as will be seen in the annexed extract, is suggested by the able and thoughtful writer referred to:

But a day must come when a people inhabiting those regions shall take a stand among the kingdoms and empires of the earth, and march onward to a prosperity beyond all present calculation. The directions of Providence seem to indicate, however, that a foreign people are to be the instruments of this redemption. A living energy must be poured into these territories from some quarter whence that shall emanate to excite the spotted races that now cover their surface into that shall displace or absorb for a new and more vigorous growth the old and decaying elements.

The government of the United States, from its geographical position, from the transcendent superiority of its institutions, from the mighty influence of its history and example before the world, from its deep and vital interest in the destiny of the continent, and from an honest and fair regard for its own rank, and conservation for its own responsibilities as the nations, ought, at this critical juncture of affairs, to take the question of the redemption of its sister republic into serious practical consideration, and to inquire what agency she may now put forth to secure to Mexico the permanent blessings of her own great heritage, the blessings of stable peace and prosperity, the enjoyment of rational liberty, and the immortal hopes of our divine religion, without any of those tramples imposed by the sword. Let the United States see to this. We believe it to be a call to that nation, and let the national voice be raised in an appeal to the administration, and we have no doubt in its response to meet the wants of Mexico.

Hundreds of intelligent Mexicans look to the United States as the last living hope for the redemption of their tottering republic. If we do not interfere MEXICO will fall in pieces, or become the rich appanage of some European power.

THE BULWER CASE.—The Bulwer matrimonial farce has come to a conclusion—for the present, at least. Mr. Robert Bulwer Lytton, the only surviving child of Sir Edward and his wife, seems to have effected an amicable arrangement. The lady is liberated from confinement, which was not "in a lunatic asylum," but it appears from the letter of Dr. Conolly, one of the most distinguished of the English faculty, that there were the very strongest grounds for her being placed under restraint. Dr. Forbes Winslow, a great authority in lunacy cases, (who was employed by the irate lady) reports that her state of mind was such "as to justify her subsequent restraint." Dr. Conolly qualifies his opinion, it may be observed, by approving of her living "in the society of her sex and female friend." Sir Edward Bulwer Lytton is fully acquitted by his son and Dr. Winslow of unkind and harsh conduct.

RIO JANEIRO.—By the arrival at New York of the bark Ellen Morrison, we have dates from Rio Janeiro to the 17th June. The yellow fever is represented as prevailing extensively in various parts of the Brazilian Empire. Paraguay, it is said, is on the point of evacuating the territory between the Parana and the Uruguay rivers, which has been held by President LOPEZ, without any right, since his war with Rosas in 1847. The Legislature was still in session, and had been memorialized to establish a line of electric telegraph to connect the principal seaports of the Empire.

The Mobile Tribune says: We have at last got to the finale of the Blount and de Riviere affair. We learn from Capt. Andrepont, clerk of the steamer Tapey, that Miss Emma Blount is now in Montgomery waiting for the arrival of her father, who is at Savannah, and that Mrs. Blount has been sent to a lunatic asylum, and the "Zouave" is still in prison at that place.

The Iberville Sentinel and Gazette says;

A dreadful murder was committed on the night of the 30th ult., at a ball in 2 house on Bayou Croux, in this parish. We are not apprised of the causes which induced the act. It appears that three men suddenly rushed into the house while the ball was progressing, blew out the lights and stabbed Mr. Pierre Labordo seven or eight times, causing instant death. Two individuals have been arrested and are now in jail in this town. They are to appear before Justice Riis on Thursday next.

A writer on lightning rods urges the necessity of closing the windows of a house after the outside has become wet in a shower. The outside is then a good conductor and the dry air of the interior a non-conductor, and the chances are small that the electricity will enter the house.

MORMON AFFAIRS.—A letter from our correspondent in Utah, says the New York Times, gives an interesting narrative of the captivity of an American officer, Mr. McNeil, in New Orleans, among the Mormons. Mr. McNeil, at the beginning of the recent outbreak, attempted to pass through Salt Lake City on his way to California, but was seized by the Mormons and held as a prisoner of war, and upon attempting to escape, was recaptured, taken back to the city, and closely confined. When the peaceful army he was released, but was conveyed, under a Mormon escort, into the Indian country, and from that time to the present has since made his way back to Salt Lake City, and has placed himself under the protection of the Federal authorities. His narrative is peculiarly interesting.

The letter of our correspondent gives a general view of the region of the Salt Lake Valley, and contains many facts in addition to details previously unpublished. It is understood to be the present intention of the Mormon leaders to petition for the speedy admission of Utah as a State. Failing in that attempt, they declare their intention to emigrate.

BRIGHAM YOUNG IN A NEW LIGHT.—The Utah correspondent of the New York Times has had an interview with the Chief of the Saints, and the conversation turned on polygamy. We quote:

Brigham scoffed at the idea that the system of polygamy was any part of the causes which have indulged the ill will toward his people, declaring that it was the purest system on earth. Upon my dissenting from this view, and expressing the honest abhorrence with which polygamy is viewed by the world, he replied with the following declaration, viz: "Easy aside altogether the ecclesiastical view of polygamy, and look at it in the contingents of Europe and America, for whom the pens are manufactured, according to order. The streets of these cities are filled to the requisite density by successive transits through the rolling mill operations, tended by men and boys. What is the thinness of the finished steel pen, length about 2 feet, breadth 2½ to 3 inches, the sheets are ready for punching, and the punching is the process is performed with great rapidity, one girl of average industry and dexterity being able to punch out about one hundred gross a day. The next operation is to place the blank in a concave die, on which a slight touch from a convex punch produces the requisite shape—that of the semi-tube. The slits and apertures to increase the elasticity, and the maker's or vendor's name or mark are produced by a similar process. Finally, however, the pen undergoes a variety of other processes. When complete, all but the slit, it is soft and pliable, and may be bent or twisted in the hand like a piece of thin lead. Being collected in grosses or great grosses, the pens are thrown into little iron boxes, and placed in a furnace, where they remain till box and pen are of a white heat. They are then taken out, and thrown, hissing hot, into pails or tanks of oil, when they may be broken like so many wafers; after drainings they are made to revolve rapidly in a perforated cylinder.

The English papers say that Queen Victoria has accepted the resignation of Mr. Fairbairn, Mayor of Leeds, on her visit to that town next month. Mr. F. is a mechanic and the manufacturer of wooden pegs. This is said will be the first time in the history of England that a reigning sovereign has accepted the hospitality of any but nobles. Queen Victoria had also made her appearance at a review at Aldershott, got up to amuse the Duke of Malakoff. Her Majesty was mounted at the review on a splendid charger. She was dressed in a scarlet riding habit. The Duke of Cambridge explained to her Majesty the various evolutions of the sham fight, while the Duke of Malakoff acted the same kind to the pretty little Princess Alice, to whom he paid true chivalrous gallantry. It was one of the best affairs of the kind which has yet been enacted at Aldershott. The Queen slept that night at the royal pavilion, in the centre of the camp. The Duke of Malakoff also remained one night.

From Washington.

WASHINGTON, August 2.—The Mexican Minister, General Robles, is preparing to leave about the middle of August for Mexico. He leaves under a congé, received some time ago from his government, to be used at any time he chose. His position at Washington is not changed, except that in the distracted state of his country, and the uncertainty of affairs there, he can do nothing officially in the United States. He is confident that ZUBAGA, or the party which he now represents, under some other chief, will hold power in Mexico, or he should not presume to take the step. Nothing might otherwise prove dangerous to him.

From arrangements made by the War Department, for the Indian wars in Washington and Oregon Territories, there will be, within a short time, 1300 or 1500 efficient troops concentrated in the portion of the country occupied by the hostile tribes.

Escape from the Castle of St. Angelo.

A correspondent of the Daily News writes from Rome, July 13th:

A feat a la Benvenuto Cellini—not to say a la Jack Sheppard—has just been performed by a French jeweler and watch maker, likewise the proprietor of a large mosaic manufactory, long established in Rome, who was arrested by the French authorities on the evening of the festival of St. Peter, charged with having created a disturbance at the Porta del Popolo, insulting one officer in that gate just before he got London, and abusing and threatening the French soldiers stationed there. (On account of the quarrelsome and combative character of the people of Rome, and the feud which has prevailed between French and Romans, the French General's orders were extremely stringent for the punishment of any one, French, whether military or civilians, and the jeweler was consequently taken off to the castle of St. Angelo, to be tried by court-martial, and it which it was generally inferred could not end without a condemnation to prison for a longer or shorter period. Meanwhile the prisoner's wife made a representation in his behalf, and was upon the point of succeeding, it is said, in softening the severity of the General-in-Chief's orders, when the prisoner himself, disgusted with the monotony of Hadrian's Mole, or apprehensive of the result of the court-martial, or fearful that political accusations of anterior date might be reproduced against him to aggravate the case, thought it would be much better to cheat the custody of the French by raising a part of the floor of his room, dropping into a corridor below, and passing down the winding staircase and out at the sally port. Without being challenged by any of the sentries, from which fact it is inferred that he was provided with a military uniform to disarm any suspicion at his appearance. The French General is extremely angry at his escape. He has ordered all the sentries under the shoulder gendarmes have been usually occupied since yesterday morning, when the event took place, in searching for the fugitive, whose own premises have been minutely but fruitlessly ransacked.

A Man Charged with Poisoning His Wife, Child, and Servant Girl.

We learn from the Troy (New York) Times, of Tuesday evening, that great excitement exists at Bennington, growing out of a remarkable case developed there, which seems to involve a probability of the murder, by a farmer of the town, in good circumstances, named Barnard Carell, of his wife, and the dangerous poisoning of his child, and a servant girl in his employ. The circumstances are these:

Monday morning Spafford rose at an early hour, built a fire and prepared the coffee for breakfast. It was customary with the wife to attend to the coffee, he told her not to mind, he could make it as well. After the meal was served, Spafford remarked that he believed he would not drink any coffee, and upon the question being put to him, his wife asked him the reason of this. He answered that he had been thinking that the beverage was hurtful to him, which Spafford replied, and a servant girl employed in the family, all partook of the coffee.

Soon after breakfast, Mrs. G. began to experience a burning pain in the stomach. She remarked this to the servant, and the latter replied that she had been similarly affected. Almost at the same time the child was complained of being unwell. These premonitory symptoms were succeeded by terrible vomiting, violent purging, painful retching, and throbbing pains in the head. A neighbor, Mrs. Charles Clapp, entering the house, Mrs. Spafford, remembering the system and method of distributing the coffee in the morning, and coupling it with his anxiety to prepare it himself, exclaimed that she had been poisoned by the beverage. Mrs. Clapp laughed at her fear, and asked for a cup of coffee, of which she drank a small quantity. Soon after she, also, was taken with the same symptoms. same symptoms were manifested in her case.

Doctors Bruce and Ranney, of the village, were called upon to attend the cases. They remarked at once apparent indications of metallic poison.

The facts thus presented were regarded as warranting the arrest of Spafford. Justice Toombs, after a preliminary examination, committed him to the Bennington jail to await the result of the cases. He refuses to say much with regard to the affair, but denies his guilt. After his examination, he declared that he would drink a cup of the coffee if it was furnished him. He drank one or two swallows and set it aside. Soon after he, too, was taken sick, vomited, and complained of the burning pain.

Yesterday morning the physicians having the cases in charge entertained the gravest apprehensions for the child out of danger. Mrs. Spafford, it was thought by them, would die. The remaining portion of the coffee made by Spafford was brought to this city yesterday for analy zation.

RECORDER SYMMES'S COURT.—MRS. A. O'Shaughnessy was examined yesterday, on complaint of Ann Coyle, on a joint charge of larceny and trespass. MRS. O'S. had gone into Ann's room, and in some trifling with her dresses, but as it did not appear that she has stolen any thing, she was committed to the Parish Prison, charged with trespass only, the case being dismissed as to the charge of larceny.

TIMOTHY and Henry Mulholland, respectively accused and accuser on counter charges of assault and battery, were also sent for trial to the First District Court. James Gallagher was also committed for trial on a charge of having cruelly kicked and beat some of the habitués of his coffee-house, corner of Poydras and Rampart streets.

JAMES H. SMITH was arraigned and held to bail in the sum of $500, on a charge of stabbing the Cyprian Mary Ann Holt. He was identified going off on a Lake boat to Mobile by one of his aged ribs, Officers Dryden and Dalton having hunted him up, and one of them getting into his graces so far, through his suggestive face, as to "clean the boat out," and told him all about his affair with Mary Ann.

ANN BROWN, charged by one Charles Hauke with having robbed $64 from him in a house of ill-fame on Dryades street, was held for examination the 20th instant.

CATHERINE LEWIS, the real celebrated Kate of divine emanation of song) was held to answer the same day to a charge of having attacked with the sacred knife or shoulder gendarmes have been usually occupied since yesterday morning, when the event took place, in searching for the fugitive, whose own premises have been minutely but fruitlessly ransacked.

A Man Charged with Poisoning His Wife, Child, and Servant Girl.

We learn from the Troy (New York) Times, of Tuesday evening, that great excitement exists at Bennington, growing out of a remarkable case developed there, which seems to involve a probability of the murder, by a farmer of the town, in good circumstances, named Barnard Carell, of his wife, and the dangerous poisoning of his child, and a servant girl in his employ. The circumstances are these:

Monday morning Spafford rose at an early hour, built a fire and prepared the coffee for breakfast. It was customary with the wife to attend to the coffee, he told her not to mind, he could make it as well. After the meal was served, Spafford remarked that he believed he would not drink any coffee, and upon the question being put to him, his wife asked him the reason of this. He answered that he had been thinking that the beverage was hurtful to him, which Spafford replied, and a servant girl employed in the family, all partook of the coffee.

Soon after breakfast, Mrs. G. began to experience a burning pain in the stomach. She remarked this to the servant, and the latter replied that she had been similarly affected. Almost at the same time the child was complained of being unwell. These premonitory symptoms were succeeded by terrible vomiting, violent purging, painful retching, and throbbing pains in the head. A neighbor, Mrs. Charles Clapp, entering the house, Mrs. Spafford, remembering the system and method of distributing the coffee in the morning, and coupling it with his anxiety to prepare it himself, exclaimed that she had been poisoned by the beverage. Mrs. Clapp laughed at her fear, and asked for a cup of coffee, of which she drank a small quantity. Soon after she, also, was taken with the same symptoms. same symptoms were manifested in her case.

Doctors Bruce and Ranney, of the village, were called upon to attend the cases. They remarked at once apparent indications of metallic poison.

The facts thus presented were regarded as warranting the arrest of Spafford. Justice Toombs, after a preliminary examination, committed him to the Bennington jail to await the result of the cases. He refuses to say much with regard to the affair, but denies his guilt. After his examination, he declared that he would drink a cup of the coffee if it was furnished him. He drank one or two swallows and set it aside. Soon after he, too, was taken sick, vomited, and complained of the burning pain.

Yesterday morning the physicians having the cases in charge entertained the gravest apprehensions for the child out of danger. Mrs. Spafford, it was thought by them, would die. The remaining portion of the coffee made by Spafford was brought to this city yesterday for analy zation.
