BTATE OF THE RIVERS.
LOUISVILLE, Jahuary 3.—The Ohio river here is alowly reing, with seven feet by water on the falls.
LOUISVILLE, Jahuary 4.—The Ohio river at this point is falling slowly this evening, with seven feet of water on the falls.

To the control of the so a cynner. we see this cally interrated at present. Mr. Becoasan fails to secure the support of his party to any of the measures recommended by him-meither to the purchase of Cuba, nor to the establishment of military posts in Mexico, nor to the establishment of military posts in Mexico, nor to the establishment of the tariff, because the Democratis have ceased to think slike, and therefore to act togettler. How, indeed, can it be otherwise? In the Nuth Democracy mans the estimation of slavery, plans of cudquest and of annexation, and free trade. Elsewhers, whether North or West, the minority still claiming to be Bemocratis sudayor, by the timed enchewing of all such starting-sause, to prefect their slender rasks from further desertion, and in proportisin as the anti-slavely sentiment waxes stoager, yield to base compromises and concessions to that dominant power. base compromises and concessions to take dominant power.

This is the true aspect of parties, and it becomes important to understand it in riew of the next freadential center. It will be apparently a struggle for preseminence between the actionalism of the forth, unsided by the South, and the sectionalism of the South, and the sectionalism of the South, singhtly supported by the imperfect nationality yet existing at the North. We attach little importance to the effort now making to organize a conservative opposition party, for reasons heretofore advanced. The article of parties will probably be as bitter and unrelenting as in 1856, and the chances are that it will terminate in the same way. The missiontune is, however, that in the present shade better than that of its opponents, because the laster are men of ose idea, who, if they possessed power, would not unlikely so abuse it as to precipitatels erisis and dissolve the Union. The Desporata will avoid this peril, but on the other hand their beterogeneous character will prevent them, even as it now does, from puresing a bold, vigorous, and well defined policy. They will halt or slagger between conficting opinions, now inclining one aide, and sino tending to the other. The utm-st they gard accomplish is to maintain stability. Progress is beyond their ability, if indeed it be not beyond their ability, if indeed it be not beyond their ability, if indeed it be not beyond their ability.

Hempstead, our acceptance of the proposition, than the latter received the following note:
