Office, 76 Chartres street. NEW ORLEANS, TUESDAY MORNING, APRIL 15, 1862. Vol. XVII—New Series. Vol. XXXIV.—Whole No. 12,361.

BY TELEGRAPH.

Special to the Daily Orleans Bee.

Camp Jackson, April 14, 1862.

We have arrived here yesterday, after the fatigue and hardships experienced in our camp posts of five days on the Tennessee river. Gen. Beauregard has sent us here on garrison duty, and to recruit our health. In consequence, packmules and knives for the battalion are hereafter to be subsisted to this place.

CHARLES ROMAN,
Captain Commanding Orleans Guard.

Affairs in Texas.

The Brownsville Ranchero.

The Brownsville Reporter of the 7th has the following account of the late skirmish on the Rio Grande, briefly noticed by telegraph:

The day was filled with rumors throughout Brownsville yesterday, relative to the fall of Corpus Christi, and the capture of the Federal troops which will be found under our Federal head. It is placed beyond question that Corpus Christi was taken on Tuesday last, the enemy advancing two columns, one to the Nueces bridge, and the other to Flour Bluff. The former had a skirmish with the Texans, in which the latter were compelled to retreat, and the occupation of Corpus Christi was the result. The latter, after the said fight, had nothing to oppose them, and they came in without firing a gun. The Texans had abandoned the town the night before, and crossed the Nueces bridge, which they burned behind them. The enemy found nothing of the public stores, as they were taken away in time. The Texans are doubtless, as of the skirmish, by which to organize well in opposition.

A fight into their own vicinity has the people of the Confederate States every cheering with joy and confidence. A battle and fight fought at Pittsburg, in which the Federal armies had overwhelming numbers and decidedly disadvantageous position, and in which the Confederates of the States of the South fought desperately, and in the end, with the loss of their general officer, Albert Sidney Johnston, defeated it, self-glorious, was the fight fully appreciated by the people of the country. Nothing of the kind could have been more timely than the victory at Pittsburg. It is the crowning of a speedy Thermopylæ and Marathon, and gives special interest thereto.

In the conduct of recruiting the Confederate States Government and people display their confidence by the number of volunteers and Free Corps, and a call of twenty-five days on the Tennessee river. Gen. Beauregard has sent us here on garrison duty, and to recruit our health. In consequence, packmules and knives for the battalion are hereafter to be subsisted to this place.

CHARLES ROMAN,
Captain Commanding Orleans Guard.
