OFFICE OF THE SUN,
SATURDAY EVENING, June 14, 1861.

COTTON—Nothing reported. Yesterday the sales were 28 bales. The following statement from the Price Current shows the actual stock on hand this morning:

Receipts to-day, 22 bales.
STOCK OF COTTON
[illegible] can be seen from the statement below that the stock of Cotton remaining in the city on the 11th instant, was 7,972 bales. According to the above statement, as kept through the year, the receipts, after adding the receipts and deducting the exports, [illegible] from our last issue to the 11th instant, [illegible] 7,972 bales. This would show an increase of [illegible] bales over the actual stock found and reported by the Secretary of the Board of Brokers. The real discrepancy, however, is [illegible] permanent allowances are made for natural shrinkage in weight, and damaged Cotton, burned and shipped [illegible] Cotton, which amount we have [illegible] previously in our Cotton statement. This [illegible] is also [illegible] and we [illegible] that it will [illegible] satisfactory to our friends.
