Vol. XIV.—Whole No. 13,196.

MARRIED.

On the inauguration of New Orleans by the United States land and naval forces, the inhabitants have been prevented from all communication with the North. This has given rise to an unthousand rumors which are circulated with great activity, and though in some degree clearly spirited from the brains of designing and not very scrupulous men, are not unfrequently received with an unbecoming amount of faith. In fact the population of our city are remarkably credulous. We have known them implicitly to believe stories of the wildest and most improbable character, based upon the slenderest of foundations. The Southern temperament, with its ardor and excitability, is easily wrought upon, and we suppose that in the absence of authentic intelligence the imagination is suffered to play fantastic tricks without impediment. Be this as it may, it would be well for our citizens to be on their guard against the thousand and one stories which are perpetually bandied about the streets.

We make these remarks, however, merely en passant. Our object is particularly to express our gratification at the prospect of renewed mail communication with at least a part of the country, and with foreign nations. The Postoffice has been again thrown open to the public, and the opening of the port will secure frequent, if not daily, communication. It is the intention of the authorities to establish mail facilities in such a manner as to give to the public the advantages of something like regularity of intercommunication. This improvement has already been partially experienced in the reception by the press of journals from which it had long been excluded. New York and Baltimore papers, which had been strangers to our sanctum for many a month, begin to regupper, and to give some employment to the editorial scissors. The time, we hope, is not distant when the city prints will receive their exchange papers by every arrival. Of course there must be some irregularity so long as the mail service is confined to the ocean.

It is not, however, the newspapers alone which will profit by the resumption of postal arrangements. The whole population of New Orleans will have reason to be gratified at a policy which will once more bring it into relations with other cities. There are friends and relatives now separated by the space which divides the North from the South, and who for nearly the first time since the establishment of the blockade will have opportunities of learning of each other's whereabout and welfare. Moreover, it is fair to presume there will be considerable correspondence of a business character. In short, any arrangement which ceases to exclude New Orleans from any species of intercourse with the rest of the world, is especially desirable, and must necessarily prove a marked accommodation to the public. When once again the mails arrive with tolerable regularity, the trade of the newsmonger will be suspended, and in lieu of a thousand harmless, magnified by the breath of rumor out of all proportion, we shall be able to deal with facts, and to judge of their import accordingly. Just at this time we fancy New Orleans is about the most ignorant and worst informed city in America. Any measure which will tend to dispel this mental darkness will be welcomed with unequivocal satisfaction.

HAVANA AND MEXICO.

By the kindness of a friend we have received Havana papers to the 30th ult. The Diario de la Marina of that date contains later intelligence from Mexico, brought by the French war steamer Bartholet. An engagement occurred on the 5th in front of Puebla between the Mexican and French forces. It appears that Gen. Lorencez having learned that the Mexican Government had assembled twelve or thirteen thousand men at Puebla, and was resolved to defend the town to the last extremity, dispatched a body of Zouaves and Chasseurs de Vincennes against two of the advanced positions of the Mexicans. The French began the assault with their wonted impetuosity, but finding that his troops had to contend with largely superior numbers, the French commander withdrew them. Almost at the same time information was received in the French camp that a Mexican force had assembled at Chiquihuite, and that the position was strongly defended with artillery so as to prevent the passage of provisions and munitions of war coming from Vera Cruz. Gen. Lorencez consequently resolved to countermarch to his previous position at Orizaba.

A private letter from Vera Cruz, dated the 23d ult., confirms the foregoing news, and states that the Mexicans were double, and perhaps treble, the number of the French, and that they repulsed the latter with considerable loss. It is rumored that the French lost 500 in killed, wounded and prisoners, and that the Mexicans likewise suffered severely. Gen. Lorencez fell back to Orizaba, and was awaiting reinforcements. Communication between that place and Vera Cruz was interrupted by the occupation of Chiquihuite by a strong Mexican force.

At Vera Cruz the yellow fever still raged fearfully. Another letter of the same date attributes the repulse of the French to their ignorance of the ground, to their doubts of the courage of the enemy, and to the superiority of numbers displayed by the latter.

THE WEATHER.—Hail and hotter seem appropriate terms to apply to the weather. May was, comparatively speaking, tolerably cool and pleasant, but June is ushered in with a temperature nearly at fever heat. Nevertheless we, who are pretty well accustomed to this torrid climate, have no right to complain, since June is always terribly warm. Indeed, according to the experience in such matters, the aggregate of heat in June exceeds that of the months of more advanced summer. As long as public health continues good, we ought to support mere heat with commendable patience. Besides, New Orleans enjoys a marked advantage over many other cities in the delicious southern breezes which spring up to-ward sundown, and revive the languid and exhausted frames of its denizens. In New York, Boston, and sundry Western cities there are summer nights almost suffocatingly hot, from the total absence of a circulation of air. Although in more northern climes summer begins later and terminates earlier than in New Orleans, our experience has taught us that one may suffer severely from protracted heat unaccompanied by refreshing breezes. Here the evening south wind rarely fails us.

NEW MUSIC.—Our thanks are due P. P. Werlein & Halsey, Nos. 3 and 5 Camp street, for the following gems:

Listen to the Mocking Bird, with variations, a charming composition by Charles Grobe.

Lover of Thee, with variations by Wollenhaupt—very pretty!

ARRIVAL.—The Spanish steamer Cardenas, Captain Burguete, arrived yesterday from Havana, with a cargo of 229 arrobas coffee and 140,000 cigars. Another Spanish steamer—the Mexico, Captain Ortega—was taking a cargo for our port.

The late Governor-General of Canada, Sir Edmund Head, has refused the Governorship of Bombay, at £12,000 sterling per annum, in consequence of the climate not being likely to agree with Lady Head. A considerate husband, truly.

The bill before the Federal House of Representatives providing for the abolition of slavery in the districts, or prohibiting it hereafter, passed that body on the 5th inst., by a vote of 82 to 50.

A DISCOVERY.—Peter Ackerly, of Ohio recently offered a reward of $1,000 for the discovery of a remedy for the cure of the bite of a rattlesnake. It has been discovered that the bite of the rattlesnake is cured by the bite of the chicken snake.

BATTLE FIELD VISITING OUR.

The Liverpool Post, commenting on the recapture of the Emilie St. Pierre, and the blockade of Charleston, says:

While writing in allusion to the Charleston blockade, we may mention that the screw steamship Haro, 900 tons, recently employed in the Baltic trade, has been sold to a Liverpool house. She has left Hull for this port, and is intended for the trade between Liverpool and Charleston. There is also in the Hull docks, undergoing an overhauling, a Modern Greece, of about 700 tons. It is understood that this steamer, also being a fast vessel, is intended for the Charleston trade.

THALBERG'S CONCERTS.—Thalberg is giving three concerts at Erard's, in the rue du Mail. The witchery of his performance is positively supernatural! Never did the pianist surely effect such wonders from his instrument. The great want in the piano is continuity of sound, such as afforded by wind instruments or the violin. Under Thalberg's magic touch the intonations of his instrument seem to flow, rising on the listening ear, and yet without haziness, or the slightest confusion—all is distinct, clear and articulate. The artist—it is thirty years since we heard him—is no longer the mere executant, enchanting the world with marvellous fingering, but an inspired son of song, moving the most hidden passions with wondrous skill, and dismissing his audience with feelings too big for utterance.

CITY INTELLIGENCE.

Provost Court—Judge Bell, Presiding.—A heavy business was done in this court yesterday. Several of the accused were dismissed, because the prosecutors and witnesses did not appear. The "drunks" were disposed of according to circumstances—some fined lightly, some severely, some to the workhouse. Some soldiers were "hit" hard. One from the land of steady habits, Connecticut, for being drunk and abusing citizens, was sentenced to six months' police duty and six months' forfeited pay. Corporal McDonald—drunk on duty and stealing two whips—was sentenced to six months' police duty and three months with a ball and chain to his leg.

Jos. Jacobs, baker, had to pay $50 for selling light weight bread.

A youth, 14 years old, arrested by an over-zealous policeman for using hostile language in Lafayette Square, was dismissed—the Judge advising more discrimination in arrests of this kind.

Louis Dalton, slave of Mrs. Haggerty, charged with stealing a horse and wagon, was discharged—there being no proof of intent to sell.

R. D. Smith, who had been ordered by the court to allow his wife and child $30 per month for their support, was arraigned for not complying. The accused protested his inability, but was ordered to go and try his best to provide the means.

Peter Thompson was Workhoused three months for burglary.

Henry Dominique, f. m. c., was arraigned for having no papers. It was decided that he should go freely, as no one claimed him for a slave, and no charge being made that he was.

Chas. Bilker, charged by Molly Mitchell with detaining her property, was dismissed—her statement showing that she gave him the property in pledge for money she owed him.

Grant was also dismissed from the charge of being accessory to the late murder.

The second day's stock case has been before the Court, which to "ye local" has been very trying. It was the case of the court-room clock, which had become a rebel, and obstinately refused to perform its functions, notwithstanding many eyes were constantly gazing at it in the dock. The only open communications with the outside world were by Chief Engineer, Wheeler, and Deputy Sheriff Hingle, both of whom, it is said, have had their patience sorely tried during the voyage, have been, as the sound sailors believe, triumphantly remodled. The steering apparatus is now so arranged that if it fall on the upper or spar deck, it can be handled on two of the lower decks, and additions in the way of canvas have been made to enable the ship to hold her own in a gale, even if the rudder happens to get out of order.

The Condemned Reprieved.—In yesterday's paper we gave the information that six men were to be shot the same morning, early after reveille, by order of the Military Commission, for violation of their parole, as prisoners of war, at Fort Jackson, in getting up a company for the Confederate army. Those who knew of the sentence and the time of its execution, saw no prospect of rescue to the unfortunate men; but the military procession was significant, and attracted the interest and attention of many persons along the route towards Carrollton avenue. An army wagon bore the six coffins, an ambulance conveyed the condemned, two priests and the chaplain of the Thirteenth Confederate Regiment accompanied, and two companies of infantry composed the escort. In an open field near Carrollton avenue the procession halted, the coffins were placed in line, the condemned took their seats upon the coffins, some files of soldiers drew up in front of them, and the last preparations were made. At this moment, when all were waiting in expectation of the fatal volley fire, Provost Marshal French waved a paper, announcing the reprieve from death of the prisoners, and the commutation of their sentence to hard labor upon the fortifications at Ship Island, or the nearest military post, during the pleasure of the President of the United States. Five of the reprieved manifested the greatest joy at their deliverance, but one, named Stanley, did not appear so well pleased, and declared he would rather be shot.

We understand that the lives of these men were spared, mainly through the exertions and appeals of Messrs. Durant and Rozier, their counsel.

A Salutary Provision.—We note with pleasure General Shepley's "Order No. 11," prohibiting officers and soldiers hereafter from forcibly entering and searching private dwellings, without written authority from General Butler, General Shepley, Lieutenant French or Major Bell. Some impositions of this kind have occurred, and we are glad to see the proper correction applied. Those having this written authority are required, also, to give to the occupant of the dwelling visited their names, the name of their company, and the number of their regiment.

Police Arrests.—There were a good many arrests yesterday and the night before, but the Provost Court has already disposed of them. Thos. Hall was arrested on Perdido street, for striking an officer with a sling-shot—also for being one of a party of four who shot and danced into a coffee-house corner of Perdido and Baronne streets, Anthony Freitas, Augustus Rain was arrested as being concerned in the late murder. In the Third District, Bill Colson, one of the Lockwood gang of desperadoes, was arrested as a dangerous individual.

A Live Jack Sheppard.—We noticed the rearrest of Thos. Conners as a fugitive from justice, after he had been in the Custom-house. It appears that yesterday, to make sure of him, the officers put the ruffles on his wrists, and left him in the guard-room to wait till called for. When summoned to come forth, there was nothing of him to be found, except the handcuffs. How he shuffled them off, and how he got away, was the mystery, which probably no one can solve—if he is caught again.

The Cornucopia.—We believe the steamer Mono has arrived in port, from Red River, with a big cargo of very desirable provisions, say 3000 barrels corn, a good lot of flour, and also bacon. This will do for a beginning, but like poor Oliver Twist we are tempted to cry out to the Moro to go and bring "more, oh!"

Inquest.—The Coroner yesterday held an inquest on the body of a lad named Lewis Riley, who died at the corner of Third and Congress streets, Fourth District. After bathing in the river, took sick, vomited, and the verdict was accordingly.

Mortuary.—The following is Dr. Dirmeyer's report of the city mortality for the week ending the last inst., Sunday last:
