THE SITUATION.

There can be small doubt that we are on the point of war, and that every part of the Southern Confederacy. It would seem that before the extreme cold of winter compels a suspension of active military operations, the Yankees are disposed to strike several points of attack, and subdue us by the force of numbers. The course of events may be to some extent compensated. Their preparations to this effect have been elaborate, long continued and extensive, that the air is full with portents of trouble. But, as far as we can see, they are not far from success. What they do, it is now apparent impossible for McClellan to remain inactive much longer. We know that he was not his intention, and there is every reason to believe that the first of his projects will be to march on New Orleans. The 1st October, he had been through the courses and disputes of Gen. Evans and his brigades. Still there is ample time for McClellan to press forward towards Mississippi, and to direct a formidable column to that State. Kentucky will never be permitted to interfere, as he by force of fraud is chosen to the car of Lincoln. Hence the extraordinary efforts of the Yankees to strengthen themselves in the State. We rejoice in the belief, however, that a spirit has been awakened among the people, who are rallying around the standard of Southern Right, and who will stand up and defend their country.

In Kentucky there is every evidence of an approaching desperate struggle. For a week past we have had authentic advice of the plotting of Federal reinforcements into that State. Kentucky will never be permitted to interfere, as he by force of fraud is chosen to the car of Lincoln. Hence the extraordinary efforts of the Yankees to strengthen themselves in the State. We rejoice in the belief, however, that a spirit has been awakened among the people, who are rallying around the standard of Southern Right, and who will stand up and defend their country.

Gen. McClellan has somewhat impeded McClellan's progress, and he cannot avoid the conflict.
