Sale of American Warships.

By U. S. Congress, Act of 10 October, 1861.

On the 1st instant, the Committee on Naval Affairs, in their report, recommended that the sum of $100,000 be appropriated to the Secretary of the Navy for the purchase of ships.

On the 2d instant, the Committee on Naval Affairs, in their report, recommended that the sum of $100,000 be appropriated to the Secretary of the Navy for the purchase of ships.

PROGRESS REPORT.

The agents of Mason, Sturges & Company appear to have ceased to exist in consequence of the action of the North. The Advertiser, in its last number, makes no allusion to them, which it would do if they still existed.

It is now evident that Mr. Chase, one of Lincoln's Cabinet, openly expresses his regards for the Confederacy. While he did not say so much, he did say that he was in favor of the South.

Seeing that Mr. Wilkes has implied political relations between the United States, and has borne the ungrateful name and abuse of the Yankees with the good temper which is natural to him, we hope that he will never again be called to represent us.

The Federal ships have sailed with the intent of capturing the blockade runners.
