Orleans streets, French, &c.

A friend has kindly placed at our disposal a batch of Jackson papers, comprising dates to the 16th instant, the notices of which have already been published here.

Death of Theodore L. McNeill.—The Merchant (Jackett) died, of the 7th instant, of pulmonary disease, announcing the death of Theodore L. McNeill, for nearly 20 years a prominent merchant of New Orleans and many years previously of St. Louis. Mr.
McNeill was well and favorably known to the mercantile community through the entire valley of the Mississippi.

Death of Vinson Bowens.—As we have already stated, Mr. Bowens, on Wednesday day evening, a complimentary benefit, which he has been tendered by his numerous friends in his city. That evening he will be in every particular be with the popular recipient, who has given up his services to the cause of the slaves, to believe, and that the performance of the evening will be in all its success equally evident when it is known that the skillful delineator of Major De Rade, the frequent of the Varieties will concentrate his great success this season; of the character of Nydia, in "Carpenter of Men," we have heard the highest praise of Mr. Bowens's rendering of the part.

From the exertions which Mr. Bowens's friends and family, can predict one of those houses to the day of his departure were wont to give the old favorite at the St. Charles. We will give leave of the beneficiary until Wednesday night, when everybody and his friend will assemble to honor to everybody's friend in New Orleans.

The United States mail steamer George Washington, E. V. Gager, commander, left
