The "Armistice Proposition."

The New York Post of the 11th inst. contains the following comments on a speech delivered by Mr. Wood at Stamford, on the 10th inst., on the war and the peace proposition. Says the Post:

Mr Fernando Wood said in his speech at Stamford last night that—

"The war was uncalled for. He had given freely of his means and influence to assist the Government, but his voice was now for peace. He declared the Conscription act unconstitutional, and urged the Governor of Connecticut and the Legislature should be forced from the State by this act without waiting upon his dead body; and he was satisfied that Seymour, their candidate, entertained this same view. He considered it their duty to stand by and elect him. Furthermore, he said, that on the 12th day of December last propositions for an armistice or peace were left in the hands of the President, which, had they been adopted, would have settled the matter by the 1st of April amicably, and to the satisfaction of the people both North and South.

Who made these propositions for an armistice or peace, of which Mr. Wood pretends to know? Would have settled the matter by the 1st of April? Not Jeff Davis and his fellow-rebels? If so, how does Mr Wood know anything about them? Has he been in secret correspondence with the enemy? Or were they made by some of the anti-war men here? If so, who authorized them? And what are the terms of the propositions from which Mr. Wood hopes so much? If they are honorable to the nation—if they are such as patriotic Americans ought to favor—why not make them public at once?

To which I say in reply, that the statement referred to was made by me deliberately, with a full and personal knowledge of the facts, and that I am restrained from the publicity of them only by the request of one of the principal officers of the Government. When this interdiction shall be withdrawn, I will cheerfully gratify your curiosity.

Very respectfully, &c,
FERNANDO WOOD.

Foreigners and the Conscription.

The New York Journal of Commerce has the following with regard to the anxiety caused by the conscription among those foreigners who have taken out their first papers:

There is great anxiety on the subject of the conscription among those of our foreign residence who have taken out their first papers. Too number of this class, of all the nationalities, is many thousands. During the last two years, when conscription under the State law was talked of, these foreign residents plumed themselves not a little on the circumstance that they were exempt from the military responsibilities which fell to the share of their citizen neighbors. And no one grudged them their privilege, for it was founded on precedent; and it was not without its justification in other respects. If the call for 300,000 men called upon to fight, he was, on the other hand, not allowed to vote. It was generally granted to be equitable that he should not be expected to do the one, until he was permitted to do the other. The wise policy of the framers of the military law has made Congress come to consider the form of a conscription bill; it was decided that foreigners who had taken out their first papers were liable to military duty equally with the full blown citizen. It is needless to say that this decision was received by native born and fully naturalized citizens.

Of course it is tried by them because it diminishes their chances in the draft. But the newspaper offices are directly affected by it, think these clients were hard to get. The keepers of the consular offices in this city with applications for relief. The office of the British Consul has been visited by a large number of such applicants. The Consuls can make but one reply to these applications—that they have no power in the premises, but that they will communicate with the Ministers of their respective Governments at Washington, or with the home Governments, and put the question in a train for settlement one way or the other at an early day. It is understood that Lord Lyons, having been consulted on the subject, has submitted the points involved to the decision of the English Government, from whom an answer is expected before the conscription law gets into operation.

OUTRAGES AT PANAMA.—A letter written on board the United States ship Preble, and dated at Panama Bay, February 8, describes some outrageous which have not been mentioned:

On Friday, preceding the 9th of February, the police ashore began firing at about quarter of 12 o'clock, and retreated towards the town. Yesterday, a rebel Colonel and ten men, bearing a flag of truce, entered the town, and said it had been arranged between the Governor of Panama and the rebels, that, in request, the United States authorities were throwing up breastworks, and have been provisioning the work with grass views. The people at Panama's number of the men, under the command of Colonel Dyer, of the Mississippi Rifles regiment, and the Rebels were to come in and occupy the town, and once they got in possession no more ship could leave the place. The next day the Governor of Panama sent a letter to the Commander of the Warrington, U.S. Sloop-of-war, informing him of the above statement. Shortly after, about 70 people were all Warrington Creek, whose aid would have been refused had it been necessary. The Warrington's Navy Yard Commissioned by Commodore Smith.

Meeting of the Union Leaguers at Philadelphia—Speech of Governor Curtin.

At a meeting held in Philadelphia on the evening of the 11th inst., of the Union League, a political club of Philadelphia, Gov. Curtin, of Pennsylvania, made on the occasion a lengthy address, from which we extract the following passages:

THE PURPOSES OF THE ORGANIZATION.

It is a high privilege to be accredited to preside over so large a meeting of the citizens of this Commonwealth, and it is a privilege I the more highly appreciate because we have been invited here to participate in the deliberations of an assemblage called for the express purpose of passing upon affairs of vital importance to all the people of the republic. This meeting of members of the National Union League is an evidence to the world that the fires of ancient patriotism have not gone out—that neither armed resistance to constituted authority, appeals to partisan prejudices from those in sympathy with our internal enemies, nor any other base appliance have availed to stifle the utterance of the loyal American citizen. It is no small honor to you, citizens of Philadelphia, that the idea of banding together all true and loyal men in the hour of our nationality should have originated in your midst. You have happily designated your associations as the National Union League; the name is expressive of the object you have in view; which is to encourage your brethren throughout the land in their struggles against political infidelity, and thus by your concurrent action secure the perpetuity of our national life.

HOW TO MEET THE ISSUE.

Any institution, privilege or interest which stands in the way of the national life, whatever it be, must fall, and so far those who are at war with the Government, they and their interests and privileges will be crushed beneath its mighty triumph. This is the inexorable logic of events, and the inevitable consequence of their own wickedness and folly. We are, as I have said, at war; engaged in a war forced upon us from necessity to preserve our nationality. We have developed resources which have astonished the world, and have put in the field larger armies than any nation of modern times; we have surrounded the coasts of the rebellious States with a cordon of vessels of war, and have, under the law of nations, proclaimed a blockade, which is respected by the civilized world. This is all recognized as proper, and if the labor of the South was performed by free white men we would be perfectly justifiable, even before the judgment of the refined best violence of this age, to cripple and destroy their labor as one of the many means of success. Can it be possible, then, that by any process of reasoning, by any sentimentality or false humanitarianism, they are to enjoy this labor, and so be enabled to continue this war, because it is devoted to slave? True, it was a right of property, regulated by municipal law, covered and protected by that Constitution which they now repudiate with contempt, but it is hard to understand why Northern sympathy should seek to afford them the protection of the Constitution for the security of any property which standeth in the way of the Government—and now, too, when their piratical vessels are destroying our property on every sea, and with no less barbarity, murdering the crews of our merchantmen. Can it be possible that the destruction of their interests should be regarded to be by those who profess to be loyal to the Government?

"NEGRO IMMIGRATION IN THE NORTH.

Appeals, too, are made to the prejudices of our people on the subject of negro immigration into the State; and it is persistently alleged in some quarters that, as the war progresses and our labor crippled, their presence amongst us. I believe it is well settled, my friends, that the free negro does not seek a Northern climate. There are comparatively few such in our midst, though there are thousands in every Southern State. Indeed, in every Northern city there are many who could come to the North. And it is equally true, my friends, that the admixture of the races is relatively rare in the North, with that in the Southern States. It would be just as likely that the masses of the people in Pennsylvania should move into a Southern climate as that the free negro should incline to seek a more Northern latitude; he is constrained by a law of nature, and if this rebellion is persisted in, and the trial of the strength of the Government with the institution of slavery, the negro will not only remain in, but go to the South, when he becomes a paid laborer there, as his climate is adaped to his physical conformation, his tastes and his habits—for in such a contest, as God is just, the Government will surely prevail.

THE MILITARY FORCING OF PENNSYLVANIA.

Two hundred thousand of our people have taken the field for the preservation of our National integrity—thousands of our sons have fallen in the States in rebellion—the rich blood of our freemen has sunk deep into the soil, and our people have sworn by the covenant, sealed, that this Union shall not be dissolved, and that generation after generation in the future shall enjoy the precious legacy of freedom given to us by the founders of the Republic.

THE CHICAGO SHIP CANAL CONVENTION.—The Cincinnati Commercial referring to the construction of a ship canal in Chicago, which the United States Congress recently refused to commence at the Government expense, gives the following as the views and desires of the Western men on the subject:

The people of Chicago, and the part of the country contiguous to that port, are so anxious for a ship canal as to undertake the construction of it as a private enterprise, we are in favor of it. But if the object of the convention is to organize a raid upon Congress to force the work, under a false pretence of a military necessity, we are opposed to it. There is no military necessity in the case. If the canal were completed to-day, on the grandest scale proposed, it would not add one regiment or one gun to the military point of view. If the canal is a commercial necessity, let commerce do the work. The Government has already quite enough business on hand.

It is just as much a military necessity that we have a ship canal around the Falls of Erie to the Mississippi, by way of the Ohio river, as that there should be one from Lake Michigan to the Mississippi via the Illinois; and we can make just as good a plea for a ship canal in Ohio as they can in Illinois. If they want a canal let them dig it.

Interesting from the Army of the Potomac.

A correspondent of the Philadelphia Ledger writes from Union Mills, Virginia, under date of the 10th, as follows:

But a few days ago, several privates of the Sixth Michigan Cavalry were killed and wounded, besides about twenty taken prisoners, near Brentsville, being caught in an ambuscade while returning from a fruitless scout. This also was supposed to have been committed by guerrillas, "Mosby's command." No further notice was taken of this affair than to send out an expedition to gather up the wounded and the straggglers. This one-sided mode of warfare will, no doubt, continue, until we find brigade retaliation, who value the reputation of the army more than they do the opinions of demijohns and bottles.

The First and Sixth Regiments of Pennsylvania Reserves are now stationed at this post, doing their duty as pickets in an obedient and orderly manner. The recent emeute in the First Reserves was caused by a misunderstanding of orders, and much of the evidence goes to show by a positive deception; but, as it is now being investigated by an authorized tribunal, the public will learn, in due time, the whole cause.

The weather continues wet and chilly, and the roads very bad.

SIDNEY.

MINING AND COTTON ENTERPRISES IN NORTHWESTERN MEXICO.—A San Francisco dispatch (9th) says:

The details of the news from the northwestern States of Mexico represent everything unusually prosperous, partially consequent on the influx of Californians with capital. The rage for mining enterprises is increasing. Cotton is extensively cultivated in Sinaloa. The quality is represented as superior. Planters are confident of realizing many hundred per cent. profit.

Opinions of Generals Cushing and Dix on the War.

We give below an extract from a letter of Caleb Cushing addressed on the 5th instant to Daniel Murphy, which was published in the Boston Post, alluding to the scheme of colonizing Florida, he says the following with respect to the war:

This belongs to that base brood of pestilent schemes of policy towards the insurgent States—subjugation, confiscation, colonization, emancipation, devastation, extermination—which sound like the delirious ravings of Bedlam let loose, which, if carried into actual operation, would in the ultimate result be those of all injured the loyal States, and which tend to cause a great national uprising, entered upon by us for the maintenance of the Constitution and the Union, to sink down into a mere desperate struggle of suicidal blind rage of mere destruction—the abolition of the Constitution and the overthrow of the Union by our own fatal hand, not that of our enemies. This gospel of death, this radical destructiveness, is the only practical disunionist existing among us in the loyal States. Though the makers of it have not actively joined the administration, it is deadly hostility to the freedom, prosperity and happiness of the people; it is treasonable conspiracy against the Government. May God in his mercy confound all such disloyal counsels.

On the other hand Gen. Dix, in a letter to Archibald Dixon, dated January 19, 1863, takes a different view of the matter. He says:

I have never doubted the successful termination of the war. I do not doubt it now. It is my prove true to ourselves. If our people are willing to make the sacrifices necessary to carry it through—if all parties will unite in support of the Government of the country; if men and money are furnished as they are needed, we shall triumph and maintain the integrity of the Union. On the other hand, if we are divided among ourselves; if we yield a reluctant support to the war; if we give aid and comfort to the enemy by embarrassing the hands of the chief magistrate with the responsibility of upholding the authority of the Government, we shall be lost and treason will triumph.

I sincerely hope, notwithstanding the strong party feeling which exists in our State, that all will be united in the patriotic and renewed vigor on the great question of upholding the Government and the Union against an unholy and treasonable effort to destroy them. If we do not, we shall lose the respect of the whole civilized world, and leave to our children a lasting inheritance of dishonor and shame.

CITY INTELLIGENCE.

Present Court—Judge Peabody—Wednesday Morning.—The docket was slim this morning, and presented very few features of interest, except the continued case of Mr. M. G. J. Tisdale.

Mr. Day and Mr. Rosslin, the counsel appointed, with a large number of witnesses responded.

Mr. Day moved that the witnesses be brought in separately, and Mr. Rosslin moved the same in regard to the spectators.

Mr. Rosslin was then examined. He was of the fair, and heard not one nothing manifesting secession feeling; saw no flags, and heard no cheers for Jeff Davis. He was present from eight o'clock till ten, and would have withdrawn himself and children if he had noticed any signs of secession.

Mr. Day asked if witness had taken the oath, and when. The answer was yes, in September last.

Mr. Allsbrook was there from 9 till 12 o'clock, and saw nothing whatever of a secession character; nor heard any music or cheers. Conversed with Mr. Tisdale several times during the evening, and heard him use no seditious language; he seemed to be entirely absorbed with the charitable object of the fair.

By Mr. Day: Took the oath on the 23d September. Walks up and down stairs; could not undertake to say that other persons might not have seen flags and emblems, but could only say that he did not see or hear any thing of the kind.

Mr. Pilcher went between 7 and 8 o'clock, and remained till 11½. Did not see or hear any thing indicative of secession feeling. All seemed animated with the charitable object of the occasion.

Mr. Day: Took the oath about the 23d September. Looked over the tables imminately. Male it his special business to watch closely, so he might report any demonstration to Mr. Tisdale that he might suppress it. Was induced to this from the apprehension that there might be a large crowd of the disaffected, who would unprudently make an exhibition of the kind. Had the impression that Mr. Tisdale was a registered enemy. Can't say my most particular associates have been among the enemies of the United States, but they have been for all clumsa. Have not been particularly cold towards Union men. I may have contributed towards the Confederate cause in the beginning. I did not subscribe to the "Cotton Circular"—was not in the city then, but approved it afterwards. On being asked if he did not now sympathize more with the Confederate cause than with the Union, was positively objected to answer, and to being catechised in that way.

Alfred Monroe was on the stand when we we left the Court. His examination by Mr. Rosselius resulted as did that of the other witnesses.

On being cross examined by Mr. Day, he said he had taken the oath, but could not tell the date exactly, without referring to the document. On being asked under what circumstances he took the oath, Mr. Rosselius interposed the objection that to such an examination, contending that those witnesses were called to testify only to the facts of the fair.

Mr. Day strenuously urged his right to show that these Union witnesses were "bogus" men, that though they had taken the oath they were still secession sympathizers—that they did not regard their oath, and therefore their testimony was not credible. If they declined to answer on the ground that they might criminate themselves, they were entitled to that protection.

The Court decided that there was a limit to such a cross examination, and it had already gone far enough in that direction—that neither time nor the case warranted it.

Mr. Day remarking that in twenty years practice he had never before been restricted in a cross-examination, and inquiring if that decision to witnesses—on which side were our your sympathies? The Court consenting, Mr. Monroe said it would take a long time fully to explain himself, but he could say in a few words that his sympathies were with the south.
