A gun by the name of Tom Cuddy went on board the steamer Jim Smith and he had been employed as a pantryman (or, as according to his own account, as a steward) for his payment. Some difficulty arose between the Captain and Cuddy about the account, which led first to violent words, then to blows, and finally to the use of fire arms. Mr. McGrail drew a pistol and shot Cuddy directly in the breast, inflicting a wound which, it is feared, will prove fatal. The wounded man, when we heard from his friends, to have been in Bayou Sara. He is a native of Dublin, about 19 years of age. A native of "Pretoria."

A Arrival of Jack Tars.—There were quite a number of tars among the Jack Tars from Pensacola who arrived in this city yesterday morning. Some among them belonged to the 26th Regiment Indiana Volunteers, and others to the Fifth, twenty-five to the Third, seventy to the Fourth. These arrivals were made in consequence of special and peremptory orders, and irrespective of any leave of absence that might have been granted to any of the men. They were ordered to be sent on board the fleet forthwith.

Prospect Course.—Judge Bell.—Thomas Kennedy, who was formerly in Rhemster Emerson's establishment has lately given way to his successor, Sir King Alcohol, and was arrested to the Parish Prison for a "big" urban disturbance, to shoot one of his neighbors, names to be handed to the United States Marshal by boisted over his house. The only shot fired therefrom struck Tom then a Cuddy, who, fancy was found in a house.

Mr. Gregory, of the well known commercial house of Gregory & Anderson, was reported to give bail in $2000 to appear on the 15th inst. and answer a charge of shooting at a man with his gun without a permit. He was arrested on the Mexican Gulf Railroad. A small chest containing bottles, beer, and two Wayo' provisions would be left in his possession.

Capt. Murphy, of the steamboat Fox, now in the Bayou, reports that $10 reward will be given by the police for the capture of Wm. Williams, a deserter from the Confederate army. Williams is a native of Ireland, and is about 5 feet 10 inches high, and has a fair complexion. He left the Fox on the night of the 29th ult., and is supposed to be secreted in the woods in the vicinity of the Bayou.

The father of the lady in question, and deputized with Miss Dupuy, to look after the articles, but her love of the pot proved, however, there was a great quantity of bread and Miss D. could not provide bread for her table. Mile., however, could not and would not do without bread; but as it was high time for her to get it she fished out the bread, and the lady had to pay for her board, that she might be committed in default of payment. The fact was she had brought the parties to Court. Judge Buck forgave the complainant to go to some other place to board and accordingly gave the lady leave to consult under the defendant's care.

Mother Taylor was arraigned on a charge of keeping the peace, and using obscene language towards a female neighbor. Several Mollies were there since Mother Taylor was arrested, some ages, and changed the officers with their bills having reduced her of a large amount of money she had locked up in a trunk, wherever her reputation may be. Seven fined upon a man's mind at age of indigestion and vomiting somewhat in this connection. The Court accordingly held an open session, and dismissed with an admonition to be prudent in her conduct.

A 26 Greeted.—Mr. Wm. Thompson, of the Baltimore Sun, and late Secretary of war in the Federal army.

There is a great deal of talent employed in the Federal army. For instance, in the Adjutant Secretary Mitchell shows an immense amount of talent in writing his reports. It is a rare thing to find a man who can properly cannot furnish information and publication enough for the completion of such a war as this.

FIGHT AT BATON ROUGE.

GENERAL WILLIAMS KILLED.

GEN. BRECKINRIDGE WOUNDED.

The Evening Delta published the following, in an extra edition, last evening:

We have the following note from an officer at Baton Rouge:

BATON ROUGE, August 5, 1862.

Dear C.—The enemy advanced early this morning. Gen. Williams went out to meet them, and led his men to parade.

I have no time for details.

Gen.'s battery threw repeated the 30, and did great execution.

The rebels were led by Gen. John C. Breckinridge. He lost his right arm by a grape shot.

The fight took place on the edge of the town—General Williams being unwilling to fire upon the helpless women and children.

Seven cavalries, but we were victorious.

We have to regret a large number of privates—among them Capt. Hunt, Gen. Brockinridge's aid-de-camp.

We shall send the prisoners to New Orleans.

I have delayed saying Colonel Allen, A.C. friend, our chief and guide, Adjutant Phelps was killed.

Our force destroyed the ram, wounded her rudder. We have two entitled to honorable discharge.

Two of our regiments were out in the fight. Gen. Williams behaved like a hero. He went into the conflict with all the excitement of men going to church.

I do not know the exact loss of the enemy—less I have not yet been sworn, because our men charged and routed regiment upon them.

We held our post, and have, besides prisoners, taken three of their guns.

I have no time for further particulars.

As a later hour the Delta published a special edition, giving the following additional particulars of the fight at Baton Rouge:

The U. S. steamship Kinsbridge came down last night, and also brings us intelligence of the fight at Baton Rouge.

Almost hour o'clock on the morning of the 5th instant, a rebel force, variously estimated at from five to fifteen thousand strong, under the command of Generals Lovell and Breckinridge, made a furious attack on the Federal camp in the vicinity of Baton Rouge. A conflict of the most desperate character ensued, with great loss of life on both sides.

The enemy charged six times upon their foes, and every time was repulsed with great slaughter, and at length retired in confusion at 10 o'clock A. M.

Our loss has been considerable, two hundred and fifty being killed, including a large proportion of officers.

Among the killed is Gen. Williams, commanding the Federal forces.

The rebel loss was overwhelming, four hundred and fifty being left dead upon the field.

Among the prisoners taken was Capt. Hunter, Gen. Breckinridge's Aid. The Union troops were under the command of Gen. Augur, and are confident they can hold the town against all odds.

Most of the dead were buried on the field, and the wounded were brought to the hospitals in this city.

Gen. Breckinridge was wounded in the
