ITALY.

Since we last touched upon this subject, we have received intelligence which makes it almost certain that it will be impossible to divert another civil war in Italy. Garibaldi, instead of retreating his forces and managing honorably, appears to be stronger to-day than ever; and boldly defies the Papal authority, the Emperor Napoleon, Austria and France. "Rome or death!" is his war-cry; and he avows that rather than abandon it, he will destroy the Italy, which, he says, he made himself.

So imminent seems the danger, that in order to avert it the Opinion Nationale, of Paris, attempts to divert Garibaldi from his proclaimed purpose, by advising him to employ the offensive route he has aroused to action, in a descent on the Turkish provinces on the Adriatic. But, that Garibaldi should do this in the teeth of his proclaimed policy, his antecedents, and this expressions of his followers, is what no one is likely to expect. How Irish King Victor Emmanuel thinks it probable, may be deduced from the facts that he has deemed it advisable to issue a counter-proclamation against that of Garibaldi; that some journals have declared that the only way of meeting the difficulty will be by the dismissal of the Ratazzi ministry, and that it is asserted by not a few of the well-informed, that, in reality, Garibaldi is perfectly in accord with Louis Napoleon, who wishes, in order to preserve to be used, that he may cover up the ultramontane party in France, by withdrawing his troops from Rome and leaving the Italians to settle with the Pope in their own way. And a fine thought to be of much significance in this direction is that announced: "On the Roman frontier an Italian battalion encountered some Belgian, supported by Papal Zouaves. After defeating them, the Italian troops pursued them into the woods of Ceprano, in the Papal territory occupied by them. In Rome," it is asked, "the sins and of the world?" Will Louis Napoleon wink at the occupation of Papal territory, and permit the Italians to escape by degrees the whole of the Papal dominions?

That the Ratazzi ministry or Victor Emanuel have no idea that this is the secret of Garibaldi's persistence by his opposition to them, that Minister himself would seem to have put beyond all question. "He is reported to have spoken as follows in the Chamber of Deputies, in explanation of the course which had been received on, and which had been pursued towards Garibaldi:"

The facts which have led to the King's proclamation are well known to the public; namely, that certain evil-disposed persons, under pretence of [illegible] supported by agents who had no right to make any. It was therefore, indispensable and necessary that all double dealing cease, to let the Italian nation know that the King and Government. It is the intention of the Crown to withdraw its confidence from those who have recourse to the extreme means which the Government had felt it its duty to employ. The Government had no desire to wage them who might declare themselves against the laws or place themselves in opposition to the fundamental principles of the constitution, and no prudential reasons can induce us either to forget it or not to cause it to be respected. The King, assisted by the support of twenty-two millions, is the representative of a real King on earth, and has nothing to fear. If, upholding the constitution, we have survived all the perils where we are, we have received, under the same banner, a national unity, a province which has made Italy what it is. General Garibaldi has not given the kingdom of Italy to the House of Savoy; he does not possess it. Italy to the only powerfully constituted monarchy for formation, and he has done so by his personal conduct. Italy and Victor Emanuel!" This language presently in virtue of his march of his that Garibaldi must prove himself obedient to the laws. If the General quits the path of loyalty, if he wants to appeal to the name of the nation, and endanger by his acts the fate of the nation, then General Garibaldi shall fall under the strokes of the law. For my part, I am convinced that the words of the King, whom he has always respected, will convince him that he has not the right to do what he does. I am therefore fully confident that the civil war will be avoided. I repel the idea of a coup d'etat, we must govern according to law, and never shall a proposal of a coup d'etat cross my lips. I express a hope that the time of the sovereign will not be ruined in vain; but if it were, the fate of Italy cannot be left in the hands of a single man, however great he may be. (Applause.)

In pursuance of this policy having proclaimed, it is reported that eight battalions of troops and a battery of artillery had left Palermo for the Province of Girgenti; while three hundred volunteers are said to have laid down their arms; and Garibaldi is declared to have left Ficanzi immediately on hearing of the King's proclamation. But, on the other hand, it is declared that, instead of all this, General Oggero having seen the Duke Di Sermoneta and Deputy Labarge (a Garibaldi), and the Chevalier Depretis of the King, the Tribune resolved them in the midst of his friends, recalled their instructions, and would not even receive a letter from his friend General Medici. And it is added that he was marching into the interior, pursued by the troops. Latest telegrams, however, are said to contradict this, and to state that he was still at Corleone, with his troops in excellent spirits.

Again, Italian journals—in the interest of the Ratazzi government, that is, assert that the English and French squadrons have received orders to act in concert with the Italian squadron in reference to possible attempts of Garibaldi at Rome; that a telegram from Toulon says that the French garrison at Rome will be reinforced by 1500 men; and that the French consul has received orders now taken upon himself the responsibility of what happens on the pontifical frontiers. While it is also reported that when the Spanish garrison had abandoned their position on the Roman frontiers, and concentrated themselves at Terracina, Velletri, and Frosinone; although they subsequently returned to their garrisons. A rumor was reported too, that an American vessel had arrived at Palermo with arms.

We do not pretend to be able to unravel these various reports and views. Their very tortuous nature would indicate the improbability that they refer are sufficient proof of the correctness of the opinion that another civil war in Italy is inevitable, if it has not already commenced.

A FATHER MURDERS HIS SON IN BROOKLYN.—The New York World, of the 29th ult., contains the following particulars of a horrid murder, committed at Fort Hamilton, on the 27th inst.:

On Sunday a young married man named Peter McGuld, a druggist in the regular U. S. service, surprised at Fort Hamilton, was murdered by his father, Felix McGuld, by shooting him with a pistol. The father resides at No. 115 Concord street, Brooklyn. On Sunday last, himself and his sons, Cromond and James, paid a visit to Peter Lane in the afternoon they got into a quarrel while walking on the road near the old stone ball ground at the head of Bacon Lane. The dispute appeared to have been about the ownership of a dog. Some blows passed between Peter and his father, and Peter's wife interfered by throwing stones. Cromond McGuld struck her, and Peter ran to the house and got his sword. He swung it round but struck at no one, when the father fired and shot him in the right breast with a pistol. The wound rapidly in fifteen minutes thereafter. The father put the pistol in his pocket and left. His son Cromond also left, and neither have since been seen.

A NEW BIRD NOT.—Not long since a certain quack, who looked on trees as an owl, was addressed by one of his patients thus: "Doctor, I want to know how it is that when we eat and drink, the meat is separated from the drink?" "Why," I will tell you," said the learned man of pills "You see as how there is in the neck two pipes, one of them to receive the meat, and the other the drink. At the top of the pipe is a lid, or stopper, and when we eat this stopper shuts up the drink pipe, and when we drink it turns back up into the meat pipe, a one-way kind of mistake. Queer separation, I assure you." "But, doctor," said the patient, "it seems to me that one stopper must play a sharp game when we eat pudding and milk."

Latest and Important from Rescue, New Providence.

The steamer Ida, Captain Clapp, arrived in port on Saturday morning, from Rescue, having left New York on the 21st ult., and Nassau on the 23d. He reports:

LOSS OF U. S. STEAMER ADIRONDACK.

The United States war steamer Adirondack was wrecked by going on shore at Elbow Key, Abaco, a dangerous reef in the Bahama or Franklin, on the 20th ult.

Captain Clapp reports her to be a total loss, and says that the crew were taken off by the U. S. gunboat S. R. Crocker.

By arrival at Nassau, on the 30th, the Guardian of that date says, we learn that there is no chance of saving the U. S. steamer Adirondack, which lately went ashore at Elbow reef, Abaco.

The Adirondack is one of the new war vessels ordered by the Government, was built at the Brooklyn Navy Yard, and launched on Washington's birthday, the 22d of February last. She is a wooden propeller, classified as first-class, and is considered a very fine vessel, with advanced towards construction before the advantages of iron-clad ships were so conclusively shown. She was of 1257 tons burden, and of 1,000 horse power. She had a breadth of beam of 32 feet, a depth of hold of 10 feet 11½ inches, and drawn 14 feet water. Her machinery is of the first class and was constructed by the Novelty Works in this city. It consists of two horizontal beam, oscillating engines, with cylinders forty-two inches in diameter and thirty inches stroke. The bottom, of which two thousand men have been put up, on Martin's patent, are provided with the latest improvements of the inventor. The propeller is a true-bladed, true screw, 16 feet 3 inches in diameter, with proportionate pitch. Sewall's celebrated condenser is attached to the machinery, and a distilling apparatus capable of distilling 300 gallons of water in twenty four hours. Her model was designed in Washington by the United States constructor, to whom she is a regular navy-built man-of-war. The Adirondack was a navy-built gunboat, of 1600 tons, and carried 13 guns. She was built at New York.

CONFEDERATE STEAMERS, &c., AT HAVANA.

Capt. Clapp informs us that there were four steamers at Havana, under British colors, waiting to run the blockade.

Also, that the steamer Kate arrived at Havana from Charleston, S. C., on the 20th ult., having made thirteen successful trips.

And that the steamer Ocala was fitting out at Charleston as a privateer, under the name of the Florida.

The Guardian of the 30th says that the Kate above alluded to, having pictures on board, had been placed in quarantine at Nassau. By her, the editor acknowledges having received a copy of the Charleston Mercury of the 21st ult., containing President Davis's message to Congress.

Affairs in Philadelphia.

A CONFEDERATE sent of the Baltimore Sun, writing from Philadelphia, under date of the 29th of August, thus describes matters and things in Philadelphia:

The following additional regiments now forming in Philadelphia have been accepted by the Governor, and are entitled to all the bounties now being paid to citizens in the proper case: 23d regiment, 30th regiment, Col. J. Wister; 142d regiment, Col. Adams, 144th regiment; Col. E. Wells; 145th regiment; Col. Johnson, 146th regiment. These regiments have rendezvous in the city, and report that not only in Mr Stanton, but the President also, assures that the draft should be dicontinued in such manner as will occasion the least inconvenience to the people. The draft probably will not be an indiscriminate one. A distinction will be drawn between persons who have families dependent upon them and persons who have no such incumbrances; and, in regard to substitutes, the statement that the Napoleonic system will be adopted, is substantially correct—that is to say, the price of the substitute will be fixed by Government, and any man, by paying $200 or $300, will be permitted to remain at home. The amount will be offered by the Government as a bounty, which will fill the ranks of the Union armies immediately. In the course of a few days it is believed that an order will be issued from the War Department giving the weight of authority to these suggestions.

EXCLUSION OF REPORTERS FROM THE CAMP The New York Herald of the 29d ultimo, under this heading, says the following:

In some of the newspapers it is stated that an order has been issued by General Halleck directing that newspaper correspondents should be excluded from the lines of the United armies. We have received no official intimation of this, but we suppose the measure has been taken in consequence of the progressive disclosure of the movements of Gen. McClellan from the James river by one or two newspapers, which might have led to serious consequences, and which has resulted in the rapid assembly of the rebel troops in front of Pope's army. The important intelligence which the rebel generals had previously received was confirmed by the discoveries in the radical papers, which cleared their minds of all doubt, and enabled them to act upon a certainty. For this breach of faith and want of patriotism the representatives of the guilty journals have been, we suppose, excluded from the lines of the Union armies. Served them right.

A writer in the London Field, in response to an inquiry how a frog or toad would prove without nothing nourishment, replies as follows: "I might ask you other questions: How do British barristers live? How do young medical practitioners live? How do poor curates? Providence, that feeds the ravens, can also tell; but surely you will not deny to the lower vitality of the frog and toad the power of living and growing upon nothing, accredited in the higher organizations of law, physic and divinity.

Characters in Victor Hugo's New Novel.

Among the various characters introduced in Victor Hugo's new novel, "Les Misérables," some offers more intense interest than the Bishop Bienvenu, the hero of Paris—La Gamin de Paris—whose life and nature is thus analyzed:

THE GAMIN OF PARIS.

The Paris gamin is joyous. He does not eat every day; he does not sleep in the bed; he goes bare, every day. He has no shirt on his body—no shoes to his feet—no roof to his head; he is like the lilies of the air, which know nothing of their Father. He is from seven to thirteen years old, lives in troops, scours the streets, dwells in open air, and on fair pair of his father's freedom, which opens down below his heels; he has a single brace of yellow list. He runs, stands on the watch, begs, wastes his time, makes plays to make them black, swears like one of the damned, knows the cabaret, knows the thieves, addresses their women like a brother, speaks slang, sings bad songs—and has nothing bad in his heart. The fact is that he has an advanced towards construction before the advantages of iron-clad ships were so conclusively shown. She was of 1257 tons burden, and of 1,000 horse power. She had a breadth of beam of 32 feet, a depth of hold of 10 feet 11½ inches, and drawn 14 feet water. Her machinery is of the first class and was constructed by the Novelty Works in this city.
