

Death of an Old Citizen and Veteran.—Yesterday witnessed, in the depth of the venerable Robert Ripley, the passing of one of the first Civil War heroes that sought to make the New Orleans of 1860 with the New York of 1861. He was a man of great energy and a leader of men. One of his daughters was the wife of the lamented Lamont, of the "Picayune," and both were lost on the ill-fated steamer that in 1860 was wrecked off Chicago with an entire party on board.

PERSONAL.—We are happy to note yesterday that J. H. Davis has been released after a few days from his confinement by the Moors on the Mississippi. His friends beyond the city who had been bravely defended as less than "rebels" have been gratified by the news of his safe return. We are sorry to learn that Mr. Clafford was once connected with the New Orleans newspaper, "The Daily Crescent," and that he has since become a member of the New Orleans bar. His services as an editor and newspaperman are well known and ranks unquestionably among the best informed and most graceful and enterprising.

There is no room in all that pertains to Southern labor and agriculture, where he would be read with pleasure, and we hope not with regret, should he be seen to give his views on some of the subjects which have been so much discussed here. Every day they are more and more evident that those uncomprehended facts with impressive theories; the public would prefer to see them elucidated by an enlightened and practical man.

Southern Immigration.

In so long and strenuous indictment against the people of this and other States involved in the late rebellion, the Faneuil Hall Address asserts: "They will not encourage Northern immigration, and will not admit free negroes and free labor, nor will they let them go there from the free States under present aspects."

It is a general opinion at the Southern press, from New Orleans to Texas, moderately refined, that the first of the above assertions is true.

The second is also true, as the following shows.
