THE POSITION OF GOV. WELLS.—We publish a communication on a subject of much interest and importance to our people at this time, the subject of Gov. Wells' official conformity and his relations to the Constitution of 1864 and to the President of the United States. It is from one who, as we have good reason to believe, is well informed on the subject which he treats and capable of speaking advisedly thereon. We commend it to serious perusal, but without endorsing those of its views which differ from opinions that may have heretofore been expressed in our editorial columns. Publishers comments we reserve for another day.

We are indebted to a friend for St. Louis and Cincinnati dates of the 5th and 6th.

DISCOMFORT TO SUGAR MANUFACTURERS.—Lister & Douglas, owners of Magnolias and Limeno estates, advertise for sale at very low prices, 500 casks fine old Clarifying and New York Sugar Boil.

Not Open Questions.

In the platforms of the "Conservative Union" party, represented by Mr. A. P. Field and others, it is complained that the combined "National Democratic" and "Conservative Democratic" parties of the State have not defined their position on the constitutional amendment, and that they have been silent with regard to the emancipation of the Negro war debt and with regard to the repeal of the ordinances nil and the nullification of secession. It might be reasonably answered doubtless that the gentlemen, Messrs. Hunter and Conway and colleagues, re-presenting in unison the respective Democratic Committees, have had no legitimate functions beyond preliminary appeals to Conservative Democrats at large for the purpose of uniting them in a general organization and agreeing upon a definite platform of principles and policy. Their immediate object being to call together a Democratic Convention of the whole State, it was only proper that they should leave it to that body to express the votes of the Democracy on the questions above stated and on all others of grave political concern. When that body shall have completed its deliberations it will be time to complain of the reticence of the Democratic party to any political question whatever.

But meantime the topics especially mentioned by the "Conservative Union" spokesmen do not seem, for any practical and profitable purposes, at the present moment, open questions. The single subject for immediate consideration, the paramount object with good citizens, with all who have deeply at heart the welfare of Louisiana, is the speedy and definitive organization and restoration of the State on the most satisfactory basis obtainable.

The anti-slavery amendment (no matured by its being; nor, if the Constitution of 1864 is maintained, is it to be already been disposed of by the late Legislature which adopted it, and, if that Constitution is not maintained, there is no Legislature to let upon it, and the immediate matter then to be attended to is to take thence measures to comply implicitly with the President's plan for rehabilitation. For a like reason the subject of assuming the war debt is removed from the sphere of immediate discussion. The Constitution of 1864 prohibits such assumption, and it will be time to discuss it, when it is settled as to whether that Constitution is to be maintained or repudiated.

As to repealing the ordinances nul and abolishing the President's Bureau, matters dependent upon Congressional action, we venture to say that the agitating at such questions is entirely superfluous because there is in the body of the people but one sentiment concerning them, and that is in altogether premature about the legal treatment of the States to put in dispute and also to without any votes in Congress.

What is observed with respect to the sentiment of the people on the confiscation act and the President's Bureau will apply to their position in reference to amnesty; their community of feeling on the subject can hardly admit of a moment's doubt.

Where really does not appear then, any hesitation toward new existing for the party organization which the "Conservative Union" movement started intended to inaugurate.
