LOST HIS INCOGNITO. This Statesman Reckoned Without His Colored Friend

Like royalty, a statesman came to town recently incog., writes a Washington correspondent of the New York Tribune. He is regarded as the natural prey of newspaper men and his name occurs frequently in the daily columns, but he wished to transact some private and important business, and realizing that to keep it private it must not be known that he was in town, he went to a hotel in the suburbs and registered under an assumed name.

After he had registered (let his name be Mr. Scott), he went cut under the trees to enjoy his incognito, but it was only for a few brief moments, for a colored porter came up and said:

"How d'ye do, Mr. Scott?" "Who in the devil told you my name was Scott?" asked that worthy. "Why, Mister Scott, I knows yo like yo waz my dady. Ain't I dun worked fer yo out at yo fact'y in Injianny? This nig dun had too manyof you 50 cents to forgit yo' name, Mister Scott." "That's all right," said Scott, taking a crisp green bill out of his pocket, "but, Sam, I've got some very important business on hand and I don't want anyone to know I'm here. So you take this, carry up my valise to my room, and don't you say a word about my name being Scott."

"Right you are, sah," and Sam was off. "Here, yo'," said he to that clerk in the office. "Give me Mr. Scott's things dar."

"Mr. Scott's things are not here." said the clerk. "These coats and that value belong to Mr. Van Dusen."

Deed they don't, boss. Dose dar par ever knowed, but he dun tell me he have some very important business on hand an' he don't want no one Mr. Scott all right."

In an hour Mr. Scott was interpapers next morning there was a column and a half about him and his presence in town. He was also the subject of a leading editorial, and no one dares to mention incognito in his presence. As for Sam, it's dollars hour. Certainly three miles would

The Bile of a Serpent an Antidote

Another very effective agent for antitoxic serum, obtained from the blood of animals which have been rendered immune by successive inoculations with small quantities of the venom. The new antidote is nothing more or less than the serpent's own bile. In reporting a series of elaborate experiments conducted by himself, Prof. Fraser recently said:

"The bile from the gall bladder of the African cobra, puff adder, rattlesnake and grass snake was used, and each bile was tested against the venom of the African or Indian cobra. For the most part the experiments were made by mixing various quantities of each bile with a little more than the minimum fatal dose of the venom, and then injecting this mixture under the skin of the animal. The object of the experiments was not only to determine if the bile can render venom innocuous, but also, if it have this power, what is the smallest quantity of bile capable of doing it?"

Having recounted the various doses which he employed, and their effects, he thus summarizes the result: "It was thus shown that the bile of venomous serpents is able, when mixed with the venom of serpents, to prevent lethal doses of the latter from producing death, and that the bile is, indeed, so powerful an agent in doing this that a quantity actually smaller than the quantity of venom may be sufficient for the purpose. It need scarcely be added that the doses of resents only minute portions of the bile stored in the gall bladder of a serpent, and that a serpent, therefore, has at its disposal enough bile to prevent injury from venom introduced into the stomach in quantities many times greater than the minimum lethal.

The bile of harmless serpents was also tested and found to be effective. though in a less degree. The same secretion from an animal like the ox was made the subject of other experiments. It was even less powerful than the bile of the innocuous snakes, and about one-seventh as strong (in its antitoxic influence) as the bile of the cobra or asp. But if enough of it were used it would overcome a fatal dose of the poison.

Dr. Fraser found that he could isolate the particular element in serpent's bite which has this surprising property, so that the antidote can be prepared for the market in very compact form. And the process of manufacture is probably quite as simple as, and perhaps more rapid, than that of M. Calmette.

Precisely how he obtained his clew the Edinburgh savant does not say. But he incidentally remarks that some of the native snake doctors in Africa have are medy, compounded of several substances, of which one is snake bile, and they are accustomed to administer it not only by introducing it into the patient's stomach (where it is probably without effect), but by rubbing it into the wound, where it would be absorbed into the blood. It is probable, therefore, that this wonderful provision of nature, which compels a serpent to secrete in one part of its system a cure for the poison that it secretes in another, has long been known in some of those countries where the information is most likely to prove beneficial to mankind.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Speed in Walking.

"There's no end of persons," said man who walks a great deal himself, "who think they could walk four miles an hour, and very likely things belong to Mr. Scott, from out they could, but they would have to in Injianny, bes' white man this nig- move along very briskly to do it. As, a matter of fact, very few indeed do walk four miles an hour: three miles: is a very fair gait, and when one exter know bout it so he dun writ some | ceeds that he is beginning to walk highflutin' name on de book, but he fast. If my recollection serves the old common time in the army carried a man two and five-eighths miles rupted by a reporter's card, and in the an hour. The distances which the soldier covers in an hour have now increased somewhat by slightly increasing the length of his steps, but my impression is that the common time remains under three miles an to doughnuts if he gets any more of be good, fair walking, and fully up to Mr. Scott's 50 cents. be good, fair walking, and fully up to man's average speed."—N. How a Pair of Them Treated a Train Load in Utah.

The sensational wild west show overcoming the venom of serpents has given by some southern Utah cowbeen discovered by Prof. Thomas R. punchers for the edification of east-Freser, of the University of Edin- ern tourists calls to mind a little trick ern tourists calls to mind a little trick burgh. It is not whisky wherewith that was perpetrated on some other Americans antagonize the poison of guilletes travelers by a couple of Salt rattlesnakes; nor is it M. Calmette's Lakers a summer or two ago, says the Salt Lake Tribune. Mortimer Alien and Albert Allen-not brothers. no relation—were on a hunting trip in the wilds of Wyoming. Their wickiup was in a picturesque little spot near Black's Fork, where deer and antelope grazed and where no white men save an old trapperhad come to mar the natural beauty or disturb the dumb inhabitants.

About once a week the young men rode over to Piedmont, the nearest railroad station, for "crackers and cheese," and mail and anything else that was handy.

One afternoon they had reached a crossing on the track where the train slows up on account of the curve. They heard it coming in the distance and quickly formed a plan. Riding away from the track, they awaited the coming of the train, and as soon as it was in sight they began gesticulating wildly, cursing and shaking their fists at one another. Their garb was very characteristic, though common on the ranges. Blue flannel shirt. worn sombrero, overalls, schapps, etc.. while Al Allen wore a brace of pistols. Their faces were tanned and carried a scattered week's growth of whiskers, and all in all they looked as tough as campers do. Of course they attracted attention and window room on that side of the car seemed to be at a premium.

Finally Mort lifted his arm and brought a quirt down across Al's back, assuming as he did so a terrible expression. Bang, bang, went couple of shots. Mort dropped to the road, the "murderer" put spurs to his horse and was soon lost in a crowd of dust. A hundred cries of "Help!" Road agent?" "Murder!" came from the car windows, while the engineer stopped the train.

Most of the men jumped off, and headed by the conductor ran toward the prostrate man. Mort lay on his side and watched them until they were within 20 yards of him, then jumped in the saddle and waving his hat rode swiftly away toward the setting sun.

DOG TRAINED TO SAVE LIFE is Member of a Crew on the South Shore of Lake Michigan.

There is a new member of the life guards at Windsor Park Beach. He does not draw a salary nor does he wear any man's collar.

To be sure, the law compels him to own a small tag with a number on it, but it is locked up in a box, for neither dog-catcher nor policeman would lay his unhallowed hands on Sir Caesar, the life-saver. He is a spiendid St. Bernard, belonging to Capt. Billie Johnson, the famous oarsman and swimmer, who is on duty day and night to rescue the imperiled bathers at Windsor Park Beach.

Caesar is now regularly installed as a member of the life-saving crew, having finished the preliminary training. Far out into the lake he can carry the heavy life-line in his powerful jaws, for his fat gives him marvelous buoyancy and his great strength the finest propelling power. His legs are as strong as a lion's and as tireless as the flippers of a seal. He has learned to plunge out to the side of an exhausted swimmer and by a rapid maneuver face the shore and wait for the drowning man to clutch, and then paddle with all speed to the shore. Capt. Billie has taken infinite pains to teach him this trick, as untrained animals, in their eagerness to save, are apt to grasp a drowning man and force him under water with their heavy paws.—Chicago Times-Herald.

In This We Are Tardy. It is strange that while this country is so far advanced in electrical railways it should be behind Europe in the pneumatic tube system of transmitting messages and small packages. Some of the large cities of Europe, such as London, Liverpool, Birming-ham, Paris and Berlin, have been provided with pneumatic tubes for transmitting messages for 40 years. Philadelphia Record.
